And I am bold enough to think that the pioneering days have not altogether gone here. Here, I believe, the chance is at its most favorable. Duke is independent, and has a vision of excellence. Best of all, you have chosen a man to lead you who is learned and wise, young and experienced, energetic but with judgment. He has, too, the imagination to see what the times require, and the courage to perform it. I doubt not that he will deserve and win your help and understanding, and be a pioneer in the South in terms of excellence. You are wise to have chosen Douglas Knight to be your president, and you are fortunate that he and Mrs. Knight have come at your call.

DR. WILLIAM C. DEVANE, former Dean of Yale College, at a University dinner honoring Dr. Knight.

“... as I accept my share of responsibility this morning, I ask you to remember your own. For this brief moment of time, we are Duke University. May men say of us in years to come that, every man according to his talent, we made it a place of wit, of wisdom, of high civilization and great service.” — From “Three Roads of Learning,” Dr. Knight’s Inaugural Address

Following are excerpts from a February 15 interview with President Knight:

What are your thoughts, sir, after some five months in office? How do they contrast with those with which you entered upon your office?

I had hopes and some knowledge of a few of the kinds of problems I thought we would be solving these next few years. I've been confirmed in both the hopes and the problems. I've found that the hopes for the leadership that the University could exercise in the South and through the whole country have been confirmed. There are so few universities in the Southeast that can really hope to do a job that is comparable, in every way, with the job done in certain other parts of the country. And this is the place, above all, that can hope to do it and should hope to do it. I've been confirmed in this. I see as much to do as ever, and I'm even surer than I was that the things can be done.

Has your position here in any way affected or altered your personal goals?

That leads one to a dangerous sort of speculation. I don't have any personal goals, really, except ones that are somehow wrapped up with the university world, with this University world in particular. I would think that some of what I tried to say back last December, when I was installed, and back before that, I think some of that would still hold as personal ambition for the place. One thing that has to be remembered is that I need to measure myself against a twenty-year time span. When I think about goals, I have to do it in the light of twenty-year ambitions. What I am trying to do right now, in my personal assessment of the University, is to find a base for working that twenty years from now will bring us out on a level of parity with the four or five other strongest universities in the country. And I have to ask what will do that in the long run. And then I have to ask what also is unusual about us, given our location, our traditions, our past—what do we expect? And so when you ask what my personal ambitions are, in the long run, they are of that order of magnitude. My own life, obviously, would be, in my eyes, a very considerable success if I could say, when I retired, that we had seen the University come to a point where most of its graduates, most of its faculty, most of its students really knew that it was as strong as any university in the United States; that its teaching was as good, that its independent scholarly work was as good, that its impact on its regional community and on the whole country was as great. If we could say those things, my personal interests would be quite well taken care of. My existence is really tied up, on a constant, round-the-clock basis with what goes on in the University. This is what I think about all the time. So far as my ambition is worth anything, it has to be the University's ambition. There is a real interaction; my life will not be a success without the success of the University. The President really commits himself to the place. He has to. He has to feel affection for it, and he has to build his loyalty to it.

Sir, do you have any suggestions as to how each one of us can contribute to Duke's success?

If you ask, "What's the place going to give me now?", there's some chance it will never give you anything. If you ask what you can do in it (not necessarily for it), there's a chance you will get a great deal from it. Your relationship to the University isn't just a matter of these four years. The University will be with you all the rest of your life. I would say that the biggest thing you can do for the University is to prove, in a variety of ways, that you actually did begin to be educated people while you were here. You prove this in the things you do later. And the thing that cheers the University most is to see its graduates doing a variety of exciting things, and creative things, and useful things. This is the most wonderful thing you can do for the University. This is what will make us feel, and you feel, that your time here was worthwhile.

President Knight, Chairman of the Board of Trustees Bunvan S. Womble, and President Hart.

An historical and solemn moment in the life of the University; Dr. Douglas Matland Knight is installed as Duke's fifth president.

In the face of an almost impossible schedule, Dr. Knight took time to address the chilly participants in an early-morning pep rally and cheered them with his warm humor.

Following is the complete text of the inaugural address President Knight delivered at the Indoor Stadium.

This is a moment of great and sombre privilege for me. I shall do my best to fulfill your expectation; I shall even try to surprise you once in a while, if I can, by doing more than you expect. But I cannot pretend that I look upon this day with the same festive eye that I bring to a spring morning or a fall afternoon. The nature of our world, and the place of a major university in it are such that no man can look on them, indeed, without a sudden catch at the heart. This would have been so even without the brutal events of the last few weeks; events which force us back to our primal convictions, and are the starkest example of that age-old struggle between civilized and barbaric, between the sane and the mad, which has always been the arena of a university.

Today I want to talk about the arena for a few minutes; but I do not want to do so by telling you what great things we shall accomplish. There is a kind of trivial arrogance about this, an idle boasting that has no place in our world. We shall simply do our best; and today I want to suggest what that best includes and why it is so important to our society and to ourselves. There are some obvious reasons for us to accomplish here everything that is humanly possible; we have an obligation to several thousand able students, and we have an equal obligation to the research, the public service, the support and stimulus of the arts and sciences which have become the nearly automatic concern and responsibility of American academic communities. But these enterprises, important as they are, do not stand alone; and unless we understand the true heart of university life, its teaching, its research and its public duties are likely to become stereotyped, conventional, finally dead.

Where, then, shall we turn if we are to understand the enduring best of the university? To those great patterns of thought which animate the human mind and spirit, patterns which lie beneath and beyond the standard academic enterprises of our day, just as they surrounded the academic world of Huxley, of Isaac Newton, of Thomas More, Augustine, Aristotle or Plato. These are, as I see it, the patterns by which both the university and individual creative mind work when they are everything that they might be.

The first of them can only be caught in an image, I think, the image of the unknown frontier on the one hand, and on the other, the heartland, the abiding community. As a metaphor, a bright dream and a reality, this opposition of the secure and the baffling is as old as man. It represents two things for us in the university world—the way formal knowledge grows, and the way the individual mind works. In each case, we reach toward what we do not know from a center of knowledge; but we modify and we change that center by our very act of reaching beyond it. In our own mythic and religious past, Adam and Eve are, I suppose, the greatest examples of this constant, reiterated human event; but it is central to the hope of any great teacher, any great artist, any great scientist, any great prophet. The heartland for any of these distinguished human beings is the immediately known, fully loved world—the world of our most intimate experience. It has about it a sense of security, a sense of abiding attachment and constantly reaffirmed meaning. In a university the ritual heartland of life is Matriculation Day, Founder's Day, Commencement; its intellectual heart is the security of the honestly inquiring mind, which has the right to feel at any time confidence about the great traditions of learning, and the great traditions of civilized human conduct no matter how these great traditions are called into question by the madness of some particular moment.

CHARLES B. JOHNSON, Ed.D.
Assistant Dean of Trinity College

But this assurance of the known and loved is, as you realize, only half of the university world. In order to maintain our confidence in our own great traditions, we must revere them on the one hand and test them on the other. This is the law for any truly democratic society; it is more than law for the university. It is the breath of life; unless we put ourselves constantly to the test in the quality, the range, and the hungering variety of our work, we do not deserve to exist. We cannot be merely a snug, comfortable, pleasant place, the place it is good to come back to because it has never changed. We are obviously the place of constant returning, but equally we are the new, the untried, the hoped for and not yet found. Between Eden and Paradise lies the university world; it lives by memory, it lives by hope, and it lives through its faith in a promised land of insight and knowledge, which is never to be fully possessed.

What power in the university holds this heartland of knowledge and this frontier of discovery together? The second of its unique talents, I think—a talent for reconciling to one another immediate confusions of knowledge and steadily more complex, and yet more coherent, ideas of order. One major element of Western society is embodied in this battle between growth and stability. In the last 5,000 years we have found ourselves again and again at critical points in our development; and we are at one of them today. Over and over we have had to find more complex ways of living, or

we have had to perish in the effort. Those societies which slipped into darkness would not, or could not, reconcile the changing demands of history and the unchanging demands of individual human life. We ourselves, in our tiny fragment of time since the 18th century, have fought four major wars which were the tragic outer signs of our disorder and our attempt to deal with it. But we meet the same issue constantly in the rise and decay of cities, of industries, even of individual families.

In the university world, a need to face both the turning points of history and the pivotal, disruptive moments of human thought is the most relentless of the tasks laid on us. And we have a duty, furthermore, to develop the very ideas that will be so troublesome as we assimilate them. A city or a country often has the problem of growth and change thrust upon it; here in the university, we create the very problem which we have to solve. To be quite specific and quite academic for a moment, my own discipline faced a generation ago the question of what was the most important about the study of literature. Was it the biography of the writer, or was it the inner, somehow independent life of the work he wrote? The truth, of course, turned out to be neither of these extremes, but a new synthesis in literary studies, a demanding new kind of insight about the art of literature and about the societies which literature embodies and brings to conscious, understanding life. If we had not moved to this new level of complexity, however, we would have seen the decline of the whole discipline. No thoughtful man would have continued to spend time on it.

And the same burden of synthesis is laid upon every other discipline of the mind, every individual faculty member, and upon every university that pretends to real accomplishment. At our point in time, for instance, we are faced with the need to nourish the arts equally with the sciences not at the expense of the sciences, but equally with them, and indeed by means of them; we are faced with the need to move into areas of study that our colleagues a generation ago did not even imagine; and as a result, we are faced with a need to see much of university life oriented to the solution of complex interdisciplinary problems rather than

Dean of the College of Engineering toward the mere continuance of traditional disciplines and fields of study. The university that ignores these shifts of concern will be second rate 20 years from now. These are not fads of the moment; they are a bold attempt to master the fantastic momentum of human knowledge by coming at it in some new ways. As you look at a major university today, you may not think of this mastery as our most critical

CHARLES R. VAIL, Ph.D.
Chairman of the Department of Electrical Engineering problem, but it is; either we explore and bring to useful order the wilderness of new knowledge, or we shall no longer be an effective force in our society—and all our brick and stone will simply build a memorial to our failure.

In this attempt (which our whole society must make) to bring order into its world, the university has a third contribution to offer. It can support the most difficult of all human enterprises—one even more demanding than the constant assimilation of knowledge which I have just described. This difficult enterprise is the revisiting of basic reality itself that rare discovery of the radical order in experience, a discovery which goes so far that it becomes simple again. Simple is a deceptive word in this setting, however; four of the best examples of this special quality in our century are Einstein, Yeats, Whitehead and Van Gogh. These men have in common one thing; each of them, in revisiting a fantastically complex tradition of thought and experience, is able to bring out of it a new kind of basic insight about the nature of things. This is the precious simplicity of truly creative thought (and thought is, I suspect, an inadequate word for it); it is the clarity which comes only at the far edge of human accomplishment, but it exists. It is our greatest reminder that all the fragments of thought and experience which are the common material of our lives can be caught up in some one pattern of coherence, com-

JOHN N. MACDUFF, M.M.E.

Chairman of the Department of Mechanical Engineering

pleteness and therefore—in the deepest sense of the word—sanity. This kind of sanity is a return to the root of things; most of us are allowed only glimpses of it; but the university must give constant testimony, and must be a constant witness, to its presence in our world.

If the process of university life is a constant alternation between frontier and heartland, if the daily task of a university is the assimilation of knowledge into new patterns of order, then I suggest that its final, almost mystical obligation is to the recognition, and indeed the veneration, of significance itself. This is the sense in which a university is most truly a religious institution; within and beyond the welter of experience, it testifies to coherent reality. And it testifies to that reality wherever it can be truly found. For us, the common distinctions between the sciences and the arts, between theology and engineering, become meaningless. We do not choose among a good poem, a great bridge, a brilliant equation, a conquered virus; as educated people we owe our respect to them all, and as members of the university community we owe our understanding to them all.

From these qualities and loyalties of the university world flow all its practical, public achievements, and all its relevance to our inner lives. The scholar and the student are at the university's heart, not just because our society depends upon educated people, but above all because human beings cry out for knowledge, order and insight. Our kind of education is not, then, just the means to life; it is a way of life. The whole universe is its province; but it is justified only by what it brings to pass within us. As we come to love equally the bright field of knowledge and the dark wood beyond our understanding, as we develop the courage to confess ignorance, and the modesty to articulate true learning, then we begin, not only to understand the university but to embody it. And this we must do, we who have the rare privilege of being here. It is the expectation put upon us all, and as I accept my share of responsibility this morning, I ask you to remember your own. For this brief moment of time, we are Duke University. May men say of us in years to come that, every man according to his talent, we made a place of wit, of wisdom, of high civilization and great service.

woman's college

Following are excerpts from an address by Dean M. Margaret Ball at the Honors Convocation, September 30, 1963.

The Woman's College was established to facilitate the education of those students at Duke University who happened to be women—not to draw them out of the larger University community, but to give them the opportunity to develop their several talents both within the smaller community which is the College and within the larger one represented by the University.

The College was created not with the thought of developing a different kind of education for women than for men, but of safeguarding equal access with men students to the University's best minds, while providing facilities designed to promote both the intellectual growth and the capacity for leadership of the women members of Duke's academic society. . . .

As a center of extracurricular education, the Woman's College is, and should remain a place where Duke women, with or without the presence or concurrence of their peers at the other end of the bus line, may consider and take positions on matters of interest and importance either to themselves or to society at large—not with the thought that Duke women have the answer to all of society's problems, but that as women and scholars, they have a valid interest in both the problems and their solution.

As an intellectual community, the Woman's College has operated, and will continue to operate on the assumption that the best road to education for most undergraduate women is through the study of the Liberal Arts. Not because knowledge of the Liberal Arts is a special responsibility of women in an age in which the nation's culture tends to be left more and more in their hands as potential or actual wives and mothers, but in the conviction that the Liberal Arts curriculum is the best yet developed both to acquaint students with the heritage of Western culture and to instill in them those disciplined habits of mind which can, and should, enable most persons subjected to it to come to grips with the problems which they will encounter in that portion of their lives that comes after College. . . .

The present members of this College, whether students or administrators, have inherited from generations of past students and from the two distinguished women who guided them—Dean Alice Baldwin and Dean Florence Brinkley, a College with a fine tradition of excellence and intellectual leadership within the University. It is my present concern that this tradition shall both continue and be reinforced—that this College shall continue to be—not predominantly a geographical expression—but an open community of mind and spirit. . . .

We shall continue to work on programs of various kinds designed to enlarge the horizons of students living on this campus—perhaps in the form of resident scholars brought to live among us for a time; perhaps in the form, so successfully employed in the past, of sponsoring symposia of interest to various and sundry disciplines; perhaps in the form of student exchanges of one sort or another; perhaps in the form of other programs designed to bring students into closer contact with people of other nations; perhaps in still other forms. . . .

Holding fast to existing programs of proven value, then, we shall nonetheless look for new ways of furthering our principal objectives, of realizing our intellectual potential. For we are a College in transition from the excellence that has been, and is, to the excellence that may be, if we—faculty, students, Administration—have the insight and will to achieve it. We are, after all, a Community of Scholars.

CLASSICAL STUDIES: Robert S. Rogers, Ph.D., F.I.A.R., Chairman. The major in Greek is concerned with the literature and history of Ancient Greece. In the second year, the student is introduced to Herodotus and Xenophon. Third year courses increase the student's knowledge of Greek language and literature. The student is familiarized with Greek dramatic poetry in the fourth year. The major program of the Department of Latin and Roman Studies involves the study of the works of Latin authors, leading to an intimate acquaintance with several great literary monuments—in prose and poetry—and their authors.

GERMAN: Herman Salinger, Ph.D., Chairman. A German major is required to take eight semester courses in the Department. In the early stages of study, the first two years, language laboratory facilities are of assistance. The major is also asked to elect courses in the other humanities, as the Department aims to place language and literature study within the framework of German civilization and European culture generally.

ENGLISH: Arlin Turner, Ph.D., Chairman. The English Department has a varied program of offerings; the major is required to satisfy a pattern of distribution rather than to take specific courses. He may follow his preferences within a wide range of English and American literature and may also take two or more courses in some "restricted" area—Elizabethan drama, 19th century English literature, contemporary fiction, poetry, and drama, etc.

ART: Earl G. Mueller, Ph.D., Chairman. The art major will elect either art history or design for concentrated study. In design, he will follow a prescribed sequence of courses designed to lead him from basic problems in design and drawing to the art of painting and graphics. In the history of art, he will effect a chronological spread of area courses and select one area for concentration.

HISTORY: Richard L. Watson, Jr., Ph.D., Chairman. The History Department offers an unusually wide range of subjects. The fields are: American (including Diplomatic, Colonial, 19th Century, 20th Century, the South, Civil War and Reconstruction, and Intellectual history), Western European (including Ancient and Medieval, the Renaissance, the French Revolution, 19th and 20th Century), English History and the British Commonwealth, Russian, Latin American, Indian and Pakistan, and Far Eastern, as well as Military and Naval history.

MUSIC: Allan H. Bone, M.M., Chairman. The study of music is usually approached through one of three different divisions of the field. While each of these may be considered a specialty, a well-balanced knowledge of all three is essential to the training of an accomplished musician. These branches are: musical performance, musical theory and composition, and musical history and musicology.

PHILOSOPHY: Charles A. Eysler, Ph.D., Chairman. Philosophy offers considerable latitude in delving into the several areas within the discipline. It does not itself lead directly to a career, except that of teaching. Individuals recognize, however, the general value of philosophic study in creating an awareness of the methods, assumptions, and goals of any field.

RELIGION: James L. Poirer, Jr., Ph.D., Chairman. Course work in this department provides a survey of the history of Christianity, as well as of other living religions, serving as a background for understanding the meaning of religion in modern life and as a basis for theological reflection upon individual and social problems. Courses are offered in such areas as the systematic or historical study of Christian doctrines, marriage and the family, non-Christian religions, and religious values in other fields.

ROMANCE LANGUAGES: Gifford Davis, Ph.D., Chairman. Courses in oral or written French, Spanish, Italian, or Portuguese extend and strengthen the skills of speaking and reading these languages and enable the student to gain insights into and to appreciate the literary works of national literatures. Extra-class activities may include honorary societies, weekly, informal supper meetings of the various language groups, or participation in the production of, say, a French play.

RUSSIAN: Stanislas de Local, Ph.D., Chairman. Like the more traditional language majors, the major in Russian emphasizes the study of culture, literature, and history as well as language. Both pre- and post-revolutionary Russia are included in these studies. Thorough and thoughtful study of the Russian language and Soviet institutions may provide the foundation for understanding and interpreting the Russian world.

social sciences

POLITICAL SCIENCE: Robert S. Rankin, Ph.D., Chairman. The student majoring in political science begins with the study of American and European political systems. Although it is desirable for the student to elect course work in each of three major areas—Political Theory and Comparative Government, American Government and Public Administration, and International Law and Relations—he is encouraged to develop a program suited to his own interests.

ECONOMICS: Frank T. de Vyver, Ph.D., Chairman. All majors in the Department of Economics and Business Administration take "Principles of Economics" and "Principles of Accounting." The core courses—"Business Statistics," "Corporation Finance," and "The Theory of the Firm" are also required. At this point, specialization begins.

EDUCATION: William H. Cartwright, Ph.D., Chairman. Prospective secondary-school teachers are encouraged to major in the academic department of their principal interest and to choose related work which will strengthen their preparation for a teaching career. "Introductory Psychology" and "Social Foundations of American Education" are prerequisite to all programs in teacher education. An entire semester of the senior year is devoted to courses in professional education and to student teaching.

SOCIOLOGY: John C. McKinny, Ph.D., Chairman. A general course in sociology introduces the student to the field and prepares him for further work in specialized areas. These include race relations, industrial relations, the city, mass communications, public opinion and propaganda, social stratification, social institutions, occupations and professions, the sociology of art, collective behavior and social movements, case investigation, social statistics, and social theory. These may be augmented by work in the related field of anthropology.

PSYCHOLOGY: Karl E. Zerbe, Ph.D., Chairman. Beyond the introductory course, the student who majors in psychology is required to complete seven semester courses in the Department, including a one-semester course in statistics. Studies not covered by specific requirements may be chosen from among offerings in biological psychology, child psychology, tests and measurements, applied psychology, and social psychology.

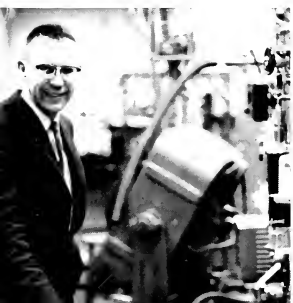

BOTANY: Terry W. Johnson, Jr., Ph.D., Chairman. A broad undergraduate program in botany is offered. Botanical studies can be divided into two areas—field and laboratory. The botany major must take two field courses (from among plant identification, ecology, and taxonomy of lower groups) and two laboratory courses (from among physiology, bacteriology, genetics, and anatomy).

GEOLOGY: E. Willard Berry, Ph.D., Chairman. Geology is a discipline which tries to explain the earth, its surface history, and its interior development. The majority of students take geology in an effort to grasp a general view of the how, when, and why of the earth. Others may prepare themselves for advanced work leading to professional careers.

CHEMISTRY: John H. Saylor, Ph.D., Chairman. The program for the chemistry major is designed to give a basic understanding of the fundamentals of chemical science and laboratory techniques and experimental procedures. In both major programs—B.S. and B.A.—the course sequence is: General Chemistry, Analytical Chemistry, Organic Chemistry, and Physical Chemistry.

MATHEMATICS: John J. Gergen, Ph.D., Chairman. A mathematics major may concentrate in the branches of algebra, geometry, or analysis. The student interested in applied mathematics should elect courses in analysis, computing, probability, statistics, and mathematical logic. He should also have a strong interest in the related fields physics, economics, etc.

PHYSICS: Henry A. Fairbank, Ph.D., Chairman. The University offers a full program for physics majors. The sequence of courses usually is: introductory physics, intermediate physics, intermediate mechanics and electricity, electronics, kinetic theory of gases and thermodynamics, advanced laboratory, electromagnetism theory and physical optics, and atomic and nuclear physics.

natural sciences

ZOOLOGY: Edward C. Horn, Ph.D., Chairman. The zoology major must take one course in each of three areas—morphology, physiology, and genetics. Many recent advances in biology have resulted from the application of biochemistry, physical chemistry, physics, and mathematics to biological investigation. New areas, such as biochemical genetics, biophysics, and molecular biology have, as a result, become interdisciplinary. A modern zoologist, then, must obtain competence and training in the other sciences.

AIR SCIENCE: John Schlögl, B.S., Lt. Col., USAF, Chairman. As a cadet airman, the student learns about weapons systems, the foundations of aerospace power, the role of the staff officer, navigation, and global geography. In addition, the cadet must complete a training program in leadership laboratories and on the drill field. Upon graduation, he is commissioned as a 2nd Lieutenant in the United States Air Force.

NAVAL SCIENCE: Edward W. Durant, Jr., B.S., Col., USMC, Chairman. In his freshman year, the student is introduced to the basic elements of seamanship and naval history. As a sophomore, he learns about naval weapons and takes an elementary course in psychology. The final two years include courses in naval engineering and leadership. The curriculum is supplemented by summer cruises. Successful completion of the program brings the ensign's gold bar.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION (EAST): Julia R. Grant, M.S., Chairman. The major program in physical education in the Woman's College has as its purpose the developing of teachers whose understanding of basic theory as well as skill in performance makes them worthy leaders of youth. The broader her educational background and her understanding of people, the more valuable the student will be as a leader and teacher.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION (WEST): John Friedrich, Ph.D., Chairman. Courses in physical education are arranged and designed to meet the increasing demand for teachers who are qualified to coach and to teach physical education. They may be taken for credit only by students in the High School Teaching Program or by majors in Education. Six semester hours may be elected from courses in Special Methods in Physical Education, nine hours from those dealing with Theory and Practice in Physical Education, and three hours from Health Education.

Collection of Southern Americana has been built up over the last forty years. It consists of books, manuscripts, music, photographs, and broadsides. The Walt Whitman Collection is the strongest of any such collection held by an academic institution. The Library is also the repository of important source materials on Southern Asia, notably India and Pakistan, and Latin America, with special emphasis given to Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, and Brazil.

The Library now looks forward to an era of expansion and consolidation. Construction will soon begin on a $5,000,000 addition, to be located adjacent to the present General Library. The new structure will provide almost twice as much floor space as is currently available. There will also be open stacks and five times the study space for undergraduates.

The General Library, seen through the Union Arcade.

The several collections which make up the Duke University Library form a firm foundation to support the educational, research and scholarly activities at Duke. With approximately 1,600,000 volumes and a staff of 134, the Library is the largest university library in the South and the sixteenth largest in the nation.

The Library has seen its most rapid development and expansion take place in the years since World War II. Since 1946, about 900,000 volumes have been added. In addition to the General Library on West Campus, distinguished collections are housed in the Woman's College Library, the Law School Library, the Medical School Library, the Divinity School Library, the College of Engineering Library, and in the areas of biology-forestry, chemistry, and physics-mathematics.

Librarian Benjamin E. Powell is understandably proud of the special collections which have contributed to the Library's strength over the years. The leading collection of Methodist literature and Wesleyana, including roughly 1,500 editions of the writings of John and Charles Wesley, is part of the Library's collection. The Flowers

graduate and professional schools

LAW, Elyn R. Latty, J.D., J. Sc. D., Dean. Duke University's Law School, on the basis of its record, ranks high among the nation's best. Coupling physical with academic excellence, the Law School last year moved into its new building, erected and equipped at a cost of more than $2,000,000. The Duke Law School is a national school, and as national schools go, a small school. Its ratio of faculty to students is among the highest of the leading law schools.

FORESTRY: Ellwood S. Harrar, Sc.D., Ph.D., Dean. Duke was the first institution to offer the Doctor of Forestry degree. The University maintains one of only two graduate schools of forestry in the nation, the other being at Yale. A 7,000-acre, self-supporting forest serves a three-fold purpose: to demonstrate methods of timber growing and forest management, to develop an experimental forest for research in forestry and related sciences, and to serve as an outdoor laboratory for instruction in forestry.

MEDICINE: Barnes Woodhall, M.D., Dean. Thirty-seven years ago, the Duke Medical Center was merely a dream. There is nothing visionary, however, about the more than 700,000 patients who have received treatment there, or the 2,177 M.D. degrees that have been awarded since 1933. Further expansion is now necessary. Ground will soon be broken for a $4,000,000 main entrance building and diagnostic and treatment center. The School of Medicine will also increase the size of its entering class from 80 to 100—"as soon as faculty and facilities are available." An enrollment of 128 in each class is ultimately expected.

NURSING: Ann M. Jacobansky, R.N., M.Ed., Dean. Some 275 students are enrolled in the School of Nursing. After graduation, some will begin careers in general nursing, while others will elect to specialize in fields such as psychiatric nursing, post-operative nursing, and nursing in clinical research units. Others will take graduate work to prepare for service in nursing education. Besides the bachelor's and master's degree curricula, the School of Nursing offers programs that enable nurses to advance professionally and to make special contributions as members of a health team.

DIVINITY: Robert E. Cushman, B.D., Ph.D., Dean. Divinity School administrators are aware of the problem of a "preacher shortage" and are hoping to alleviate it in the immediate sense of preparing for greater numbers of students who will be studying to enter the ministry. The renovation of Divinity and Gray Buildings will begin next year. The work is the first step in a long-range plan for the expansion of facilities. The most modern teaching accommodations, plus new areas for work, worship, library research, and Christian living will be included.

ARTS AND SCIENCES: Richard L. Prodmore, D.M.L., Dean. A student seeking admission to the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences must have received an A.B. or B.S. degree (or its equivalent) from an accredited institution. His undergraduate program should be well-rounded and of such quality as to give positive evidence of a capacity for graduate study. The School now offers work leading to the following degrees: Master of Arts, Master of Science, Master of Education, Master of Arts in Teaching, Master of Hospital Administration, Doctor of Philosophy, and Doctor of Education.

In a recent issue of the Alumni Register, Mr. Brinkley outlined the policies governing undergraduate admissions:

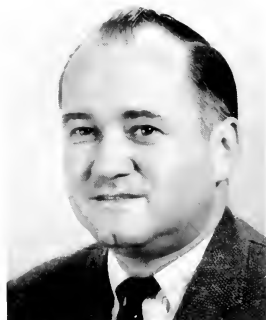

"The history of admissions at Duke and other institutions is one composed of stages. At first, or in stage one, an institution is seeking desirable students and is concerned with filling its beds. In stage two, the institution is able to fill its beds and also to select its students as to those who are judged most likely to succeed. The third stage is reached when the institution has many more candidates who are qualified to do its academic work than it can admit. This last stage is one in which Duke now finds itself.

"For a number of years, the average scores of the entering freshman classes have been rising along with a corresponding increase in the quality of the school records. On the basis of these objective measurements, it can be said that Duke enrolls a freshman class which ranks favorably with colleges and universities commonly regarded as the best. . . .

"Duke faces the following dilemma in its deep concern with and for its policy on admissions: (1) it recognizes the limitations involved in drawing fine lines on the basis of objective measurements; (2) it has decided to limit its undergraduate enrollment for the express purpose of maintaining and enhancing a quality program in education for its students and also in recognition that this is the best use of its resources because it cannot be all things to all men; and (3) the large number of candidates presenting themselves for admission are more and more clustered at a high level of academic achievement and aptitude. . . .

"The Office of Admissions has an aggressive program to search out and seek to enroll talented, intellectually curious, hard working, and dedicated students. With the assistance of approximately thirty faculty and staff members, plus its own staff, the Office visits over 300 secondary schools each year in some twenty-five states. In addition to this, it runs a Counselor Conference Program for three days each October, at which time it brings to the Duke Campus secondary school officials from all over the United States for on the spot orientation about Duke University."

financial aid

Duke is concerned with the education of students with ability and ambition. It is the aim of the University Scholarship Committee and other organizations and individuals affiliated with the Student Aid Program to provide, insofar as possible, financial assistance that may be required by students, accepted for entrance, who are unable to defray the expenses of college from their own resources. Such assistance may take the form of a scholarship, a grant-in-aid, a loan, or part-time employment.

The figures relating to student aid are impressive. The total amount of assistance is now in the neighborhood of $1,500,000. Over half of this amount was allotted to over 1,000 undergraduates in scholarships, grants-in-aid, and remissions of tuition. Students borrowed upwards of $300,000, and they earned, through part-time employment on campus and in the Durham area, over $400,000.

appointments office

The Appointments Office is concerned with assisting undergraduates—and now, with an expanded program—alumni who may wish to avail themselves of the resources of the Office, in the search for summer employment and permanent, post-graduate positions. Approximately six hundred prospective employers visit the campus each year to meet with students.

house counselors

The twelve house counselors play an important role in the everyday life of the Woman's College and School of Nursing dormitories. The resident women act in an advisory capacity, assisting the dormitory as a whole and individual students as well. When the offices of the Woman's College and the School of Nursing are closed, the house counselors officially represent the University.

alumni affairs

The Department of Alumni Affairs coordinates the various activities of the respective alumni organizations of all of the University schools and colleges. The Department was established with the special purpose of serving former students and enabling alumni to serve the University and its present student body. The Department's program is diverse: it is responsible for the annual giving program (the Loyalty Fund), the local alumni clubs, the programs initiated by individual classes, alumni publications and literature, special campus events which may attract alumni participants (Homecoming), and so on.

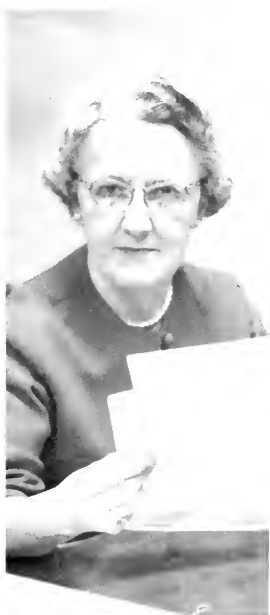

The Duke University National Council is a working body for alumni interests and alumni activities. Its efforts are devoted to advancing the welfare of the University by appropriate means. The Council holds two meetings annually, one at Commencement and the other in the fall. The governing body is composed of representatives from each class, local alumni associations, students, members of the faculty and administration, parents, representatives-at-large, hon-made up of the women graduates and former students of Duke and its predecessor, Trinity College. The Alumnae Council, established by the Alumnae Association in 1925, is the working organization of the latter group. The Council attempts to bind more closely the alumnae and the University and to advance the interests and aims of Duke.

The Department of Alumni Affairs and the Alumni Association publish The Alumni Register ten months of the year, to meet the interests of both alumni and the University. The periodical hopes to keep alumni in touch with one another and with what is now going on at Duke. The Alumni News is sent to all alumni four times during the year.

The role of extracurricular organizations in undergraduate education is often and easily overlooked or misunderstood. Their function ought, perhaps, to be re-evaluated and re-emphasized. Duke is, in a sense, fragmented. The four undergraduate divisions—Trinity College, the Woman's College, the College of Engineering, and the School of Nursing—are at once independent and interrelated. Extracurriculars contribute to the desired and necessary unity of these schools. Each body boasts its own government, its own distinctive academic and social groups, although in many of these areas a real inter-college relationship exists. "Something for everyone" appears to be the prevailing attitude, as the range of activity is broad indeed. The major areas of interest are: student government, service and guidance, religion, music and drama, media, recreational, professional, military, and honoraries.

The MSGA Constitution reads, in part, as follows:

We, the students of Duke University, in order to further the activities of student life, promote a widespread interest in student affairs, govern ourselves by just and righteous laws, and develop a greater spirit of progressive citizenship, in accordance with the powers granted to us by the administrative authorities of Duke University, do hereby establish this constitution . . .

. . . The purpose of this organization shall be: to promote the best interests of Duke University; to advance the welfare of the individual students; to cooperate with the administration and faculty in regulating matters pertaining to the conduct of male undergraduates; to represent student opinion in student-faculty-administration relations.

Executive, legislative, judiciary

The powers of the MSGA President include chairing the Senate and making appointments to the various MSGA offices. The President also serves as a vital link between the student body and the often-maligned, though no less essential administration. Aiding the President in fulfilling his duties are the members of the Cabinet—the Vice-President, the Secretary, and the Treasurer. Completing the executive branch of student government are the several MSGA committees: Student Life, Investigating, Academic Freedom, Educational Affairs, Campus Relations, Publicity, Freshman Government, and NSA. The Newsletter Staff and the Attorney General are executive aides.

The legislative functioning of MSGA depends upon the Student Senate. This body is composed of two representatives from each of the four undergraduate classes and the MSGA executive officers. The Interfraternity Council and the newly-formed Association of Independent Houses work under and with the Senate.

The Judicial Board and the Court of Appeals make up the judicial arm of MSGA. Founded to protect the individual student, the two courts exercise jurisdiction over cases involving the misconduct of students in Trinity College or the College of Engineering, including instances of traffic violations, dormitory damage, physical irresponsibility, and the like.

Also included in the structure of MSGA are the Traditions Board, charged with instructing each incoming class in the traditions and ways of the University, the Elections Board, which arranges, regulates, and conducts all elections within the jurisdiction of MSGA, the Student-Faculty-Administration Committee, which brings together representatives of each body in an atmosphere of cordiality and understanding, the State Student Legislature, the Collegiate Council for the UN, the Freshman Council and the freshman organs of self-government.

It would be difficult, if not impossible, to total the MSGA balance sheet for the year. As a student organization, it achieved notable "successes" and equally notable "failures." The publicized highlights of the MSGA year were: the censure of a senator, the rejection of the Honor Code, a Senate resolution voicing opposition to the North Carolina "Speaker-Ban," the appearance on campus of Governor George Wallace, under the auspices of NSA, the formulation of an overall "student philosophy," revision of the University policies regarding the possession and use of alcoholic beverages, examination of the reasons for a shortage of "date tickets" and the high cost of renting a chapter room, with accompanying recommendations, an evaluation of courses and instructors, a Senator's resignation over the dismissal of four students, and a vigorously campaigned three-way election for MSGA President in 1964-1965.

In reviewing his administration, President Kip Espy drew attention to the following: "Practically, MSGA cannot use a system of strict direct democracy, but it does sound out campus opinion by formal methods of questionnaires, opinion polls, and, for the first time, open forums. Through the representation of your officers on the University committees, SEAC, and on a personal basis, MSGA has increased administrative awareness of student participation in the day-to-day running of Duke and in the planning of Duke's future. Therefore, I believe that the parking fee levy effected without student representation is a matter of the past and never to be repeated.

Evaluation of past dormitory renovations and plans for future housing facilities has been accomplished through student government representation. Working with IFC, the inequitable housing contracts for fraternities were held in abeyance and finally cancelled. The maximum number of date and guest tickets to athletic contests was offered. Parking spaces for undergraduates were reserved before football games. A more adequate bus schedule was worked out. . . .

. . . . A committee headed by the Attorney General and including members of MSGA, the political parties, and interested students completed a study on the structure and purpose of political parties . . . MSGA has also been working to improve the structure, finances, leadership, and facilities of the intramural program.

Of course, the problem of the drinking policy was readily apparent to all. From a student group on campus, opinion was solidified on this point and brought to the Administration through MSGA. After three months of careful consideration by students, Deans, and the President, the passage and administration of the rule change was accomplished through MSGA. The current policy demands student responsibility, is consistent with social reality, and allows effective and equitable enforcement.

. . . . Open forums for the student body were held on every substantive campus issue—the honor system, the penal code, political parties. Meetings were broadcast periodically over WDBS and Senate reports were made available to each living group. In addition, the MSGA Newsletter was carried over in expanded form from last year.

Beginning the year with a new and revitalized structure, the Women's Student Government Association was determined to be an effective means of representing the women students. The elected legislators brought back ideas from their respective houses for possible student government action; weekly newsletters and bulletin boards kept the entire campus informed as to what the Legislature was doing. Representative government, then, became a reality. In addition to the WSGA executive officers and the dormitory representatives, the NSA Co-ordinator, the Judicial Board Chairman, the House Presidents' Board Chairman, and the Dean of the Woman's College served on the Legislature in an ex-officio, non-voting, advisory capacity. To aid the legislators, a Secretariat of ten freshmen was selected to attend to the seemingly endless run of office tasks and details, which had previously been assigned to the elected representatives. The Secretariat thus reduced the "busy work" of the legislators, and, at the same time, served as a training ground throughout the year. Planning for an exciting program for next year, dealing with the American presidency, was begun.

Structural changes

Another important change which the Legislature formulated this year was a new committee structure. The recently reformed committees will have better defined areas of concern and will investigate many of the problems and proposals in which the Legislature is interested.

Dynamic government

The new Legislature has helped to make this a dynamic year on the Woman's College campus. It has attempted to reflect the changing opinions and ideas of the students and to relay these to a receptive administration. Dean Ball attended the weekly meetings of the Legislature; President Knight accepted an invitation to a student government banquet, and the four undergraduate student governments jointly sponsored a luncheon for the

for freshmen interested in student government.

Concrete improvements

Following student opinion, the Legislature was able to work closely with the University administration in obtaining vending machines for the dormitories. An extension of library hours was also granted, as was the request for the Union to remain open longer for breakfast. Extensive work on the Honor System was carried on, and the "traditional" Pay Day was found to be unnecessary. Reports on other areas of campus life, in which student interest had been expressed, were also prepared.

Programs to meet problems

WSGA this year initiated other programs. The International Relations Forum sponsored four dinner meetings with experts in particular areas of current international concern; the guests delivered after-dinner speeches, and led the discussion. The program was very well received and supported University Trustees. These and other developments indicate how student government is helping students to have a real voice in the policies and planning of the University.

SALLY MCKAIG

The juridicial arm of the Women's Student Government Association, the Women's Judicial Board, founded in 1949, is made up of twelve members — one representative from each East Campus dormitory and a chairman and a secretary, elected by the entire student body. The philosophy of the Board demands that the individual student be granted as much freedom and responsibility as is consistent with the welfare of the Woman's College and the well-being of the student body. The regulations of the Woman's College are, therefore, subject to periodic reevaluation and revision. At the present time, the Board is completing work on a new edition of the Woman's College Handbook. The Board is also responsible for the Code of Campus Living and the experimental Honor Code.

Administration, improvement

The primary functions of the Board are to review instances of major rules infractions and to act as an appellate body for cases referred from House Councils and the Traffic Court. In recent years, however, fewer cases involving rules infractions have come before the Board, and more time has been spent on non-disciplinary matters. Thanks to the Board's efforts, sophomores now have twelve o'clock permission on Monday through Thursday evenings, and all students have been granted midnight permission during examination periods. The advisability of allowing juniors to have cars on campus has also been discussed. Early in the year, the Board sent letters of welcome to freshmen and upperclassmen and sent copies of East house rules to the Interfraternity Council for reference during Rush.

A WSGA auxiliary, the Coordinate Board serves as an intermediary between the administration, faculty, and student body. Seeking to improve relations between these "factions" and to create a clearer understanding of issues, the Board polls student opinion in areas which merit its concern and investigates problems brought to its attention by the WSGA legislature. After reviewing the facts it has gathered, the Board may suggest effective solutions to the problems it has surveyed.

Improvements meet student needs

The Board this year studied book prices and the feasibility of establishing a student exchange for used books.

The possibility of installing a stamp machine in the East Dope Shop was also considered and a pre-Rush letter sent to freshman women. Through the Board's work, bus service has been improved, library hours extended, vending machines installed in East dorms, and an informal, voluntary "dead week" before exams adopted.

engineers' student council

Chartered by the MSGA in 1952, the Engineers' Student Council is the chief governing body of engineering students. The Council is composed of a President, Vice-President, a Secretary, Treasurer, and representatives from the professional societies, engineering honoraries, and the separate classes of the College. Council meetings are open, and suggestions from observers are welcomed.

Activities

The Council coordinates the activities of the various student organizations within the College. Council members planned and directed the annual Engineers' Show, supervised elections, and maintained the engineer's student lounge. The group also sponsored freshman orientation lectures and published the College's magazine, the DukEngineer.

The Nurses' Executive Board coordinates and supervises the diverse activities of the Nurses' Student Government Association. The Board is composed of NSGA officers, the chairmen of the various NSGA committees and auxiliaries, and the president of the freshman class.

The work of the Board

The Board attempts to assure the enforcement of the NSGA Constitution and, through the Nurses Honor Code, to instill in each student nurse a sense of personal and professional responsibility. The Board is constantly re-evaluating the Honor Code, with the aim of making this unique system a meaningful reality in the lives of the student body which it represents. Members of the Board have also worked closely with their counterparts in the Men's and Women's Student Government Associations, discussing areas and problems of mutual concern and exploring the possible means whereby the various organs of student government may function most efficiently.

A trend-setting vehicle of communication, the Nurses' Student Faculty Committee seeks to unite student and faculty opinion, or, at least, to seek out both student and faculty thinking on issues and problems confronting the School of Nursing, thus creating an atmosphere of understanding and cooperation. The Committee sponsored several student-faculty coffee hours and discussion groups to bring undergraduates and professionals together.

The co-ordinating judiciary body of the Nurses' Student Government Association, the Nurses' Judicial Board prefers to address itself to legislative rather than punitive action. Narrowly interpreted, the Board's responsibility is to try infractions of the rules legislated by the Nurses' Student Government Association. But in a broader sense, the Board is responsible for supervising all phases of student conduct which concern Hanes' residents. Ultimately, the Board's goal is to encourage each student nurse to govern herself responsibly — academically, socially, and professionally.

Hanes House and Hanes Annex, adjoining Duke Hospital, are the campus homes of student nurses.

The Board's composition

Integration of the Nurses' Judicial Board and the Nurses' Student Government Association is effected through the Board's membership. The seats on the twelve-member council are occupied by a Chairman, the Chairman of the Nurses' Honor Council, the Chairman of the Nurses' Social Standards Committee, the Recording Secretary of the Nurses' Student Government Association, the vice-presidents of the four classes, and one additional representative from each of the four undergraduate levels.

The Honor System has become a tradition and a way of life in the School of Nursing. Its purpose is to secure the cooperation of the entire student body in assuring honorable conduct in all areas of student life—academic, professional, and social. Each freshman formally becomes a member of the Honor System by signing a pledge of acceptance in the presence of the entire student body. It is hoped that living under the Honor System will promote in each student an increasing awareness of individual freedom and responsibility, which will continue to serve her in the years after graduation.

A post-operative case.

Members of the Council

The Nurses' Honor Council consists of a Chairman, the Vice-President of the Nurses' Student Government Association, three representatives from each undergraduate class, and three faculty advisors. Recognizing that acceptance of an honor system demands a certain maturity, the Council, in trying breaches of the Honor Code, concerns itself with encouraging students to govern themselves responsibly. The Council, therefore, bases its decisions on how the growth and learning of the individual and the interests of the School of Nursing will best be served.

Program and committees

The organization influences virtually every phase of University life; its activities affect almost all undergraduate men. "Service" and "fellowship" are perhaps most characteristic of the "Y." With a viable religious and ethical framework within which to work, the group is devoted to positive action and service to the entire University community; its program is designed to enhance campus life, and its committees structured to allow for personal development. The Committees are: Campus Chest, Freshman Advisory Council, Youth Welfare, National-International Affairs, Public Relations, Religious Life, Publications, Community Development, Campus Co-operative, and Dad's Day.

YMCA government

The several committee chairmen, along with the President and other "Y" officers, form the Y-Cabinet, the governing body of the YMCA. Cabinet members meet once each week to formulate policies. When these guidelines are set forth, it is through the individual committees that concrete goals are achieved.

men's freshman advisory council

Established seven years ago as a YMCA committee, the Men's Freshman Advisory Council begins its work at the end of the summer, when "Y-Men" welcome their "boys" to Duke in an informal letter. Later, during Orientation Week, FAC's are on hand to assist and advise the new student. Y-Men help carry baggage, proctor placement tests, supervise physical examinations, usher at administrative functions, and smooth over the rough spots of registration. During that first critical week, members of the advisory group counsel their boys collectively and individually regarding the adjustment to college life.

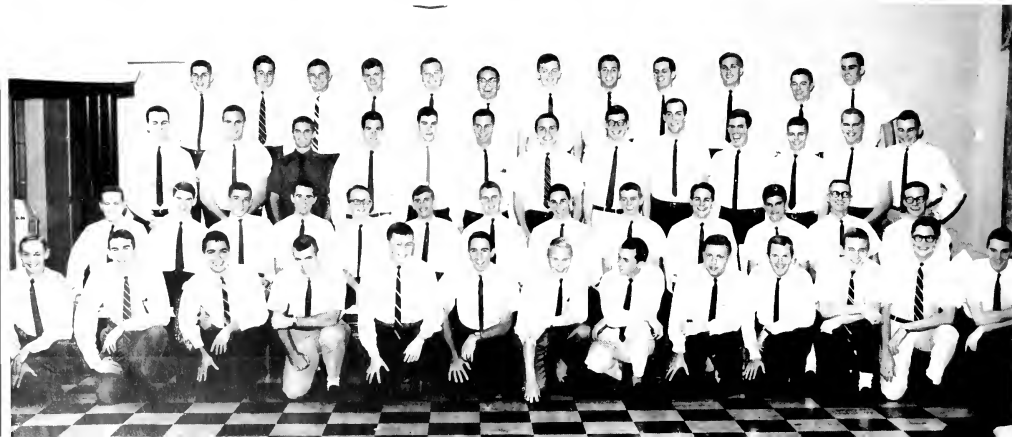

A helping hand

A second phase of FAC service continues throughout the academic year. On his periodic visits, a Y-Man may discuss—on a personal basis—such topics as class attendance and the extracurricular program. Working closely with housemasters, FAC's also aid in the solution of scholastic and/or social problems that may arise.

Each year there descends upon the Woman's College campus another avalanche of freshman girls, each of whom will approach her new situation with butterflies, dreams, and a self-confidence which she hopes will pass her

From the first day, when she helps "her girls" move in, the FAC personalizes Duke University. An outgrowth of the old Nurses' Orientation Committee, the Nurses' Advisory Council acquaints freshmen, affiliated, and transfer students with the patterns and practices of the School of Nursing.

Orientation and before

Before the arrival of new students, members of the Committee are hard at work writing letters from "big sisters" and planning the orientation program. During the rush of Orientation, Committee members assist in registering new students, instructing them in the rules and regulations outlined in the student handbook, conducting tours of the campuses and Duke Hospital, and introducing new students to the social life of the University.

Founded six years ago and completely revamped last year, the Engineers' Guidance Council is a valuable aid to freshman engineering students. Especially helpful during the first weeks of classes, the Council provides individual counseling. Stressing scholarship, the group offers review sessions in preparation for hour quizzes and provides individual tutoring for students in "problem areas"—calculus, descriptive geometry, and physics.

The Advisors

Chosen each spring on the basis of academic record, maturity, and responsibility, the forty-two members of the Council attempt to instill in their advisees a sense of their unique position and an awareness of the duties and challenges that confront them.

Helping the needy and the worthy

The Committee selected appropriate charities and canvassed all of West Campus. The organizations aided this year were CARE, World University Service, the American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association, the American Association for the Blind, Edgemont Community Center, and the Durham County Mental Health Association. Two representatives from each East dormitory and three freshman representatives-at-large make up the Committee.

A busy and diverse schedule

"Design for a Duchess" was mailed to incoming students during the summer, and another handy publication, the "Duke Pictorial Calendar" was published during the fall. Social Standards sponsored the MSGA-WSGA banquet in October, when Dr. Knight spoke on the role of student government, and the Coed Ball, when the CHANTICLEER QUEEN was crowned. The Committee also assisted in preparations for the regional United Nations Model Assembly, held informal coffees for University visitors, and attended to the arrangements for a luncheon for University Trustees. Social Standards also sponsored picnics, "Twilight Hours" concerts in the Sarah P. Duke Memorial Gardens, and the annual WSGA-Sandals banquet in the spring.

Change and the Committee

After studying the Committee as it now exists, the Woman's Student Government Association has decided to restructure Social Standards; the Committee will no longer exist in its present form, but its work will be carried on through other WSGA committees.

nurses' social standards

A standing NSGA committee, Nurses' Social Standards establishes rules and guidelines in order to maintain high standards of personal conduct, inasmuch as these determine the individual's relations with fellow students, the University, and the nursing profession. The Committee, composed of two elected representatives from each class and a chairman chosen by the entire student body of nurses, hopes that its regulations will encourage the formation of practical professional ethics.

Orientation, Evaluation, Discussion

The Committee sponsors an orientation program for freshmen and graduate Hanes residents, evaluates its own policies and regulations, with an eye to making changes and suggestions when necessary, and hears instances of rules infractions. In addition to its regular bi-monthly meetings and monthly business meetings, the Committee may "call" a session to discuss new issues and problems, or to meet with the undergraduate classes and or NSGA to announce changes, or to clarify policy. Financial support for the Committee's program comes from the proceeds gathered from the sale of Social Standards Calendars and bids to the Coed Ball.

The Duke University Religious Council, established as a successor to the old Duke University Church, was organized in 1955. Since that time, it has served as the center of religious life on the Duke campus. From the various committees of this interdenominational, student-faculty group come the plans for campus-wide religious programs and events designed to enrich the life of members of the University community.

Dr. Charles Coulson addresses a Faculty Club luncheon.

Special Services and Events

The responsibility for supervising the planning of special religious services and events lies with the Special Observances Committee. Leaders in many fields are asked to share their knowledge and insights with the University community. Science and religion, moral concerns, marriage and the family, religion and the arts were some of the themes discussed during the past year. Dr. Charles A. Coulson, a Methodist preacher and Director of the Mathematical Institute, Oxford University, was one of the major figures to appear in 1963-1964.

Religion with an International Flavor

The Interfaith and Fellowship Committee aids in planning events for students of diverse religious, racial, and national backgrounds. The major activities of the Committee are the sponsorship of an international, interfaith group of students from Duke, the University of North Carolina, and North Carolina College, the annual international reception, and the Interfaith Dinner.

Edgemont

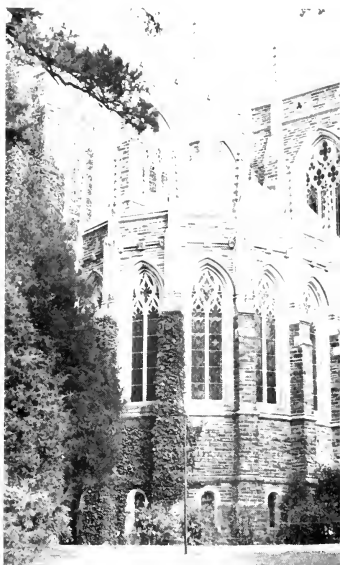

Edgemont Center, originally established by the Duke University Church, is still another concern of the Religious Council. The Center has the dual purpose of providing leisure activities for Edgemont residents and providing Duke students with the opportunity to develop leadership skills, learn program planning, and gain some appreciation of the value of social service.

Denominational Groups

The Religious Council also serves to co-ordinate the programs of the various denominational groups on campus. Through services of worship, social activities, dinner-discussions, and recreational and service outlets, group members are united by the bonds of fellowship. The organizations represented are the Baptist Student Union, the Christian Science Organization, the Episcopal Student Fellowship, the Society of Friends, the Lutheran Student Association, the Methodist Student Movement, the United Student Fellowship, the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation, and the Newman Club. Additional opportunities for religious affiliation and expression are provided by non-denominational groups: the YMCA, the YWCA, the Religious Activities Committee in the School of Nursing, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, and the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship.

men's glee club

Now in its seventy-eighth year, the Men's Glee Club promotes interest in good music and presents polished performances of selected works. The Club offers a rich musical experience to its sixty members, as well as the opportunity for social and educational development.

A traveling troupe

The Club's appearances are not limited to the Duke-Durham community; members have traveled to cities across the country. The thirty-sixth annual Spring Tour included concert stops at Tampa, St. Petersburg, Ocala, and Jacksonville, Florida. The Club also sang for the Durham Lion's Club, the Carolinas Kiwanis Convention, and the North Carolina Press Association Conference. Other activities during 1963-1964 included a concert for freshmen during Orientation Week and fall and spring concerts with the Women's Glee Club. Some twenty men joined members of the Women's Glee Club on a short tour of North Carolina.

Acting Director James Young

Professor Paul Young was on a leave of absence during 1963-1964, and Mr. James Young directed the Glee Club. Mr. Young joined the organization last year as accompanist and assistant to Professor Young. The Club rehearses regularly on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

women's glee club

The Women's Glee Club is dedicated to introducing music into the life of the University. In a typical Glee Club concert, the audience may be treated to familiar and favorite compositions, while, it is hoped, learning to appreciate other musical concepts and forms. Selections may range from folk songs, Negro spirituals, and musical comedy numbers to the works of traditional masters, notably Palestrina and Bach.

Major concerts

The 1963-1964 season included three major concerts. The first of these was scheduled for Dad's Day, in November, and was a joint performance with the Men's Glee Club. Highlighting the evening were selections from George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" and the first movement of Vaughan Williams' exciting work, "A Sea Symphony." Mr. James Young took the podium on this occasion, while Professor Paul Young was on a brief leave of absence. Professor Young returned second semester to direct the remainder of the season—another concert and the annual Spring Tour.

Auditions and training

Glee Club auditions are held twice annually. At these times, members are also chosen for an apprentice group, the Women's Chorus, where voice-training and technical proficiency are emphasized.

chapel choir

Selection as a member of the University Chapel Choir is one of the highest honors that may be conferred upon a singer at Duke. The principal function of this fine choral group is to provide appropriate music each Sunday morning for the interdenominational service of worship, held in the University Chapel. Through membership in the Choir, students have an excellent opportunity to master some of the great choral works.

Handel and Mendelssohn

Along with its regular Sunday performances, the Choir gives two concerts each year. The first concert of the past season was a stirring performance of Handel's "The Messiah," presented in December. The same program was later repeated as a feature of the Founder's Day program. The second concert, the Mendelssohn oratorio, "Elijah," was presented in the spring.

Considerable time and effort must be expended if the high standards, demanding of the Choir in every performance, are to be maintained. Under the firm but sensitive direction of Professor Paul Young, rehearsals are held each Wednesday evening. On Sunday morning, there is a final reworking and polishing of that day's music. Moreover, every member of the Choir is asked to participate in another campus choral organization, so that voices are always at their best level and pitch.

With a full complement of singers—approximately forty upperclassmen and graduate students—the Chancel Singers perform major works from the library of choral literature. This year, the group's expanded repertoire included portions of the "Magnificat," by C.P.E. Bach, presented in December, and the "Symphony of Psalms," by Igor Stravinsky, performed in April in Alice M. Baldwin Auditorium. The Chancel Singers also participated regularly in the YWCA Vespers, held in East Duke Chapel.

Open Rehearsals

In Monday practice-sessions, the group is presented with challenging music; they work not only to improve their musicianship, but also simply for the pleasure of singing. The rehearsals are open to the public, enabling the University community to witness and, more important, to hear outstanding music performed.

the harlequins

The unique, entertaining style that characterizes the HARLEQUINS was officially brought into being in the spring of 1961. The group has, since its founding, appeared regularly before Duke audiences, while extending its reputation beyond these sacrosanct halls of ivy. The "style" close harmony, likeable and listenable has been beamed to radio and television listeners and viewers in Boston and Philadelphia. The dozen personable young men are, understandably, very much in demand at dances and parties, particularly at women's schools and colleges.

The HARLEQUINS' repertoire, a subtle combination of modern melodies and songs with a "barbershop" flavor, enlivened the banquet for freshman women and the Coed Ball this year.

"No moon at all . . .": the Harlequins entertained at the Coed Ball.

In a tape session, the HARLEQUINS' second album, aptly titled "Second Half," takes shape.

The Concert Band began the year with its traditional Fall Retreat at Camp Chestnut Ridge. The weekend was filled with rehearsals and opportunities to get acquainted with new members and to develop an "esprit de corps."

A varied and rewarding program

Highlights of the year were the two formal concerts, one in the fall and one in the spring, when guest artists and composers-conductors performed. Vincent Abato, saxophone, and Philip Farkas, French horn, have appeared as soloists, while Charles Delancy, Norman Dello Joio, and Iain Hamilton have written works commissioned especially for the Band.

Other major activities included the three and one-half day Spring Tour to neighboring cities and states, lawn concerts in the Sarah P. Duke Memorial Gardens, and the gala Beach Weekend at the end of the year.

symphony orchestra

Skilled amateur musicians, under the direction of Dr. Allan Bone, aim to present good music and to maintain high performing standards. Members are drawn from the student body and from the ranks of interested and qualified musicians in the Research Triangle area.

Musical activity

Three Symphony concerts in Page Auditorium featured works from the classical repertoire and also the debuts of "Four Movements for Chamber Orchestra," by Phillip Rhodes, and "Serenade for Orchestra," by Richard Trevarthen. Both modern pieces were written while the composers were studying under Iain Hamilton, Mary Duke Biddle Professor of Music. Soloists this year, Loren Withers and Susan Starr, were both pianists. Selected members of the Symphony also appeared with the Schola Cantorum.

Ranked among the very top bands in the South, the Duke University Marching Band has, in its fifty years of existence, grown into an organization of over eighty men. The Band is widely acclaimed for its clever half-time shows, musical proficiency, and rousing, nay deafening spirit.

March, play, travel, and yell!

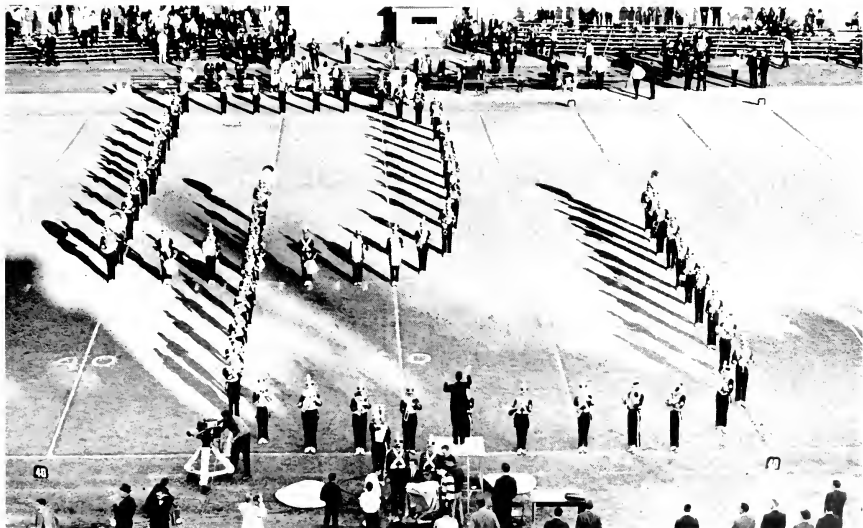

The Band performs at all home games and travels to nearby away games and one distant game. In recent years, the DUMB has journeyed to Richmond, Jacksonville, and Dallas, where it appeared on coast-to-coast television in the Cotton Bowl. Performances during the 1963 season included a salute to ACC schools, a medley of Broadway show tunes, and an original arrangement by Richard Trevathan of the Music Department.

"A cloud of dust and a hearty D-U-K-E KAH!!!"

madrigal singers

The mixed group of twenty-five voices has as its purpose the study and occasional public performance of vocal chamber music which is beyond the scope of the larger chorus. The repertoire draws upon the "classical" madrigal and past song literature of the 16th and 17th centuries and, being performed in its original condition and language, is of interest to language students, as well as musicians and singers. A demanding vocal medium, the experience offers rewards in practical musicianship, ear training, and sight reading. The discipline also helps to develop musical style and taste.

Terpsichorean provides girls who have a background in the dance and who wish to continue their training with an opportunity to express themselves and to share their talents and interests with others.

The art of the dance

The modern dance club has, during the past year, contributed to the cultural life of the University on several fronts. The group sponsored a "master class," conducted by Alvin Ailey, an authority on and innovator in creative dance, thus making it possible for members to develop this form of expression. Additionally, in a series of lecture-demonstrations, the attempt was made to introduce to the campus modern dance performers, the basic philosophy and thought of this art, and the methods of choreography, including an explanation of labanotation—the system of recording movements. Terpsichorean also produced a spring concert, which featured dances inspired by contemporary music and literature, notably interpretations of North Carolina folk ballads and popular traditions.

An organization as old as the University itself, the Duke Players has, over the years, established a firm tradition of fine theater — be it classical, comic, dramatic, or "absurd." Any student may join the troupe, as full membership is based on the amount of time spent with and interest shown in the work of the Players.

The 1963-1964 season included a number of fine performances. In October, Samuel Taylor's "The Pleasure of His Company" was presented in Page Auditorium. Later, in December, came "The Glass Menagerie," by Tennessee Williams, given in Branson Hall, and, finally, in March, "The Zoo Story" and "The American Dream," two plays by a new light in American drama, Edward Albee.

hoof 'n' horn

The annual Hoof 'n' Horn production is staged during Joe College Weekend and at Commencement. The group, self-supporting and run entirely by students, has the distinction of being the oldest musical comedy organization in the South. The club's history may be traced back to the 1930's, when it was founded to encourage and implement the writing and staging of original plays. Formerly, every production was written, directed, and staged by students. Recently, however, the club has turned to the popular repertoire of Broadway and off-Broadway musical comedy.

By contributing to the annual production, students may develop their special talents, whether "up front" or as a member of the production crew. The club's policy-making executive council is made up of approximately ten students. Anyone who works with a show, in whatever capacity, is thereby received into full membership.

Can-Can

This year, Hoof 'n' Horn presented Cole Porter's Can-Can, with two performances during the Joe College festivities and two at Commencement. A visual and musical delight, the popular classic was directed by President Carol Jennings in the Hoof 'n' Horn tradition of fun and good entertainment for cast, crew, and the audience.

THE ARCHIVE

301 Flowers. A red couch, old Archives, free books from Random House addressed to our imaginary Book Review Editor, a poster in big purple letters—"Help! Students! Join Our Campaign Against Illiteracy!" Jerry Hobbs, a hitchhiking math major who likes American fiction—he read 110 books one summer while operating an elevator between the first and second floors of a clothing store in Indiana—and writes some himself; Jini Rambo, the freshman from the little town in Pennsylvania "where people didn't write poetry," except that she did, beginning when she was eight; Alex Raybin who wrote a letter to the Chronicle about the distressing lack of a lunatic fringe at Duke and promptly dropped out of school—Duke's only representative of that fringe; Brian Van der Horst departing after spending the first semester trying to write a single sensuous poem about a girl he once loved; Scooter Woodruff in black boots and plaid wool jacket, inspired by Whitman, but not imitative, thoughtful in his criticism and wild in his imagery; Kaye Vale, who writes stories out of an unexpectedly lyrical

—ink and wash drawing by Eric Baylin and powerful imagination hidden by her graying hair; Aileen Fletcher, happy and relaxed, with a good eye for art; Bill Tucker, an economics whiz, fascinated by history and frustrated by the Archive staff, surviving by dint of his dry wit; and the contributors, from freshman poet struggling with Life, Love, and Literature to story writers who never come in except to submit a finished product.

We've had activities: public readings and extracurricular but serious poetry and fiction seminars conducted by Jim Applewhite and Fred Chappell respectively, Romantic poets aren't "in" right now, but Jim is one anyway and a good one. Fred is both poet and novelist (It is Time, Lord) and this year was chairman of the Literary Arts Celebration, held April 16th and 17th. Guest critics were Andrew Lytle, novelist and editor of The Sewanee Review, poet Robert Watson (A Paper Horse), and Doris Betz, short story writer and novelist (Tall Houses in Winter). So the Archive is a story of people, and its list is not complete without Dr. Blackburn, the sustaining force behind much of the creative writing at Duke, not just because of his criticism but because of his compelling personality and his caring so very much about helping and encouraging writers that they cannot but respond.

The Tower of Campus

Thought and Action

The Duke Chronicle

FOUNDED IN 1905

THOMAS G. MONTGOMERY
Business Manager

The immediate objectives of the DUKE CHRONICLE are to inform the campus and to keep abreast of, if not to anticipate, student opinion. In a year of change and planning for change, editorials, features, and special articles focused on the concepts and the realities of undergraduate life in an expanding University community. Occasional contributions to "The CHRONICLE Forum" and a steady stream of "Letters to the Editor" gave real meaning and urgency to the word "debate."

Advertising revenues suffered with the loss of almost 3,000 inches of space ordinarily devoted to cigarette promotion. Notwithstanding, the CHRONICLE was able to maintain a full publication schedule of six and eight-page issues, twice each week. A special edition was devoted to the inauguration of Dr. Knight as Duke's fifth president. Later in the year, an extensive four-part series, "The Negro's Status," analyzed the dynamics and progress of the civil rights movement, with an historical approach to the problems in the Durham-Chapel Hill area.

The DukEngineer
Official Student Magazine of the College of Engineering
DURHAM, NORTH CAROLINA

Originally published as a mimeographed paper in 1940, the DukEngineer has since grown into a sleek quarterly, with a circulation of over 1,000 copies. Recognized as one of the leading collegiate engineering journals, the magazine reflects both technical proficiency and vocational enthusiasm.

Table of contents

Semi-technical in nature, the DukEngineer publishes articles of general interest and importance in the fields of civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering. Readers are informed of the new developments in these areas and of current projects and research. Regular features include news of the several engineering societies, the Girl of the Month, and "Lub," the popular humor page.

Once more Duke University's "feature" magazine (which featured ribaldry too subtle for the pub board—and many of our readers—and some of our editors to catch), romped through another year. Peer, guided by mystic editor Jo Ellen Sheffield, adopted its "new look." Or rather four-and-a-half new looks, one for each issue. The key-word became "balanced magazine," a term which theoretically meant a combination of purely humorous and purely

"feature" (or, non-humorous) material, but which more accurately describes the tightrope between what the students wanted (Peer is a four-letter word) and what the powers-that-be would tolerate. The result was a cross between Pollyanna and Christine Keeler—which is pretty funny when you think about it. Only in Peer is found an extemporaneous interview with Pete Seeger on the value of transcendentalist experience (if one wants to find it) juxtaposed with original light fiction, clever but not always original cartoons, and funny but not the least bit original jokes. Plus vignettes, sketches, scenarios, satire, parodies, travesties, and pertinent editorial comment. Plus girls a la Duke (in color). As long as its students can stop, look, listen (or perhaps one reads for oneself) and laugh, Duke can never be a peerless university.

The Duke PLAYBILL

Published fourteen times each year, the Playbill furnishes critical reviews, program notes, and brief biographical material to inform Duke audiences. All major University attractions - productions of the Duke Players, the annual Hoof 'n' Horn show, the concerts of the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs, the Artists' Series, etc. are provided with appropriate programs by the Playbill staff. With a literate and sophisticated flavor, each issue is attractively designed to capture the mood of the particular performance.

Now in its fifteenth year, the Radio Council oversees the operation of the Duke Broadcasting System. The Council is made up of student representatives, the Dean of Men, the Dean of Women, the WDBS station managers, and a faculty advisor. The Council establishes the basic policies of WDBS; it approves the broadcasting format and the station's budget. At the annual May banquet, the Council presented outstanding service awards to WDBS personnel.

In November, Dr. J. C. Wetherby, coach of the University debate team, noted that there was a critical lack of interest in debating. He added that "Duke has had one of the best debating teams in the South down through the years . . . debating is the only purely intellectual University competition, and Duke should be at the top." For a while, it looked like the lack of student participation would cause the University to cancel its appearance in several major tournaments.

In December, Dr. Wetherby announced that ". . . there was a fine response, not only from regular debaters, but from new members as well." The team then entered the Dixie Classic at Wake Forest, the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament at South Carolina, the William and Mary Tournament, the Camellia Tournament, the Navy Tournament, the West Point Regionals, also playing host to the Duke Invitational Tournament in March.

engineers' radio council

Since its founding in the 1930's, the Engineers' Radio Association has provided Duke engineers with the means and equipment for amateur radio operation, while advancing the study of radio telephony and telegraphy. Work with the "rig" has continued as in the past, but added emphasis this year was placed on distance work, as members sought to establish communications with Europe.

Competition and the CSACI

The engineers also worked to contact as many stations as possible within a specified length of time. And the Association again sponsored the Confederate States of America Centennial Award, presented each year during the Civil War Centennial to the member who communicated with each state of the Confederacy at least once during the year.

The Duke Broadcasting System was founded in 1950. WDBS is completely self-supporting, deriving its income from local and national advertising. The station's staff is divided in four major areas: production, engineering, business, and sales—all under the direction of student managers who, in turn, are responsible to the station manager. Within each division, there are special departments, such as remote engineering, programming, publicity, recordings, and copywriting.

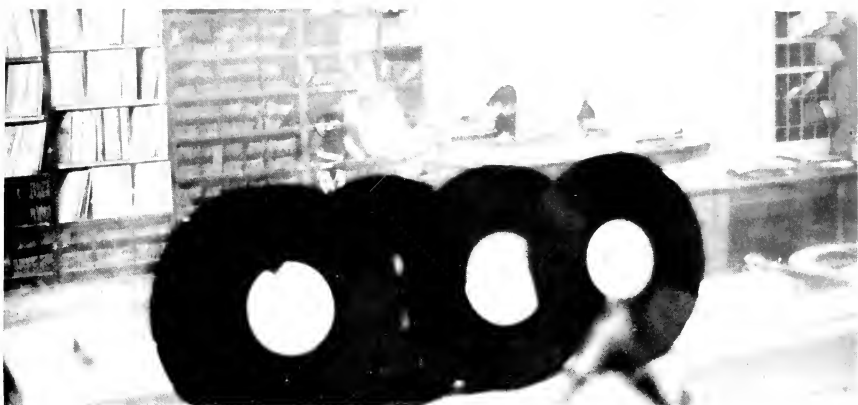

Good listening

A new program of round-the-clock, 24-hour-a-day transmission has meant that WDBS has brought the best in music, news, sports, and features to East and West campuses, including Hanes House, and the Men's Graduate Center. UPI and local news is presented every hour on the half hour, and there is a 15-minute summary of world and campus events at 7:00 P.M. Adopting a "good music" format, WDBS maintains an extensive collection of record albums. "The University Hour," from 7:15 to 9:00 each evening, is devoted to classical music. A complete sports roundup is featured at 10:45. The station's coverage of Duke games—at home and away—is of special interest.

Chairman Bill Nichols

The Symposium Committee was established six years ago. At that time, it was pointed out that "... members of the student body and faculty have recognized the need for a symposium where eminent scholars and specialists could gather to discuss with the student body topics of current interest." In bringing to the campus each year a distinguished group of thinkers and practitioners in a given field of interest to take part in a symposium, the Committee hopes to contribute substantively to a lively, intellectual University atmosphere. The eighteen student members of the Committee are carefully selected through interviews; five faculty members, with full membership status, are also invited to aid in the planning. The Committee is unique in that it is supported almost entirely by contributions from other student organizations.

Informative discussion, a topical issue

The theme of the 1963 Symposium was "Contemporary Literature . . . A Post-Human Age?" Speakers presented their views on the effects a changing society and a culture in a state of flux many have on the modern writer. In the afternoons, the four guests participated in informal seminars on both campuses. Dr. Tom Driver, drama critic for The Christian Century and Professor of Christian Theology at Union Theological Seminary, delivered the keynote address, "Poetry, Prose, and People." On the following evenings, speeches by Jules Feiffer, satirical cartoonist and humorist, W. D. Snodgrass, Pulitzer Prize poet, and Ralph Ellison, novelist and lecturer, were heard. A student-moderated panel discussion followed the major speakers; the Reverend Robert Mill, Chaplain to Episcopal Students, Reynolds Price of the English Department, and Dr. W. D. White of the Religion Department exchanged views and comments.

The Student Union seeks to stimulate, promote, and develop social, recreational, cultural, educational, and spiritual activities within the University. Directed by the Board of Governors and the Board of Chairmen—the latter composed of the heads of the seven Union committees—the Union plans and carries out several programs throughout the academic year for the benefit of the University community. It is largely through the events sponsored by these seven committees—Educational Affairs, Major Attractions, Social, Special Services, Fine Arts, Publicity, and Special Activities—that members of the Duke community come in contact with the Union.

The Spread of Ideas

Educational Affairs presented dinner seminars, short courses, and several speakers. Featured this year as major speakers were Serge Lentz, of Paris-Match, who spoke on conditions in Communist China today; Sergio Rojas, at one time associated with the Castro regime, who spoke on the Communist infiltration of Cuba; and Dr. Harold Taylor, former president of Sarah Lawrence College. Duke professors who participated in the "Last Lecture" series were asked to speak as if they were delivering their final address to a group of students. In these artificial circumstances, the lecturers emphasized personal experiences and or philosophies.

Social and Cultural Attractions

Under the auspices of the Fine Arts Committee, Page audiences were treated to the minstrelsy of Richard Dyer-Bennet, the piano artistry of Susan Starr, and the skill and coordination of the Alvin Ailey Dance Theater and the Riverside Singers. The Committee also sponsored the North Carolina Symphony and a Sidewalk Art Exhibit. A film festival and the Music Lounge in Flowers also attracted the connoisseur and the curious.

Major attractions this year brought to the campus the road company of the prize-winning Broadway play, "A Man for All Seasons," the Smothers Brothers, comic folksingers, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, directed by Arthur Fiedler. The Social Committee organized open houses after home football games, Candlelight Cabarets after home basketball games, the Homecoming Dance, and freshman open houses. Special Activities presented Max Morath, ragtime pianist, sponsored tournaments in table tennis, golf, and bridge, and maintained a talent bureau.

The Black Watch marched . . .

. . . and the Smothers Brothers clowned.

Committees to serve

During Orientation Week, Special Services sponsored a "major fields" program, a question and answer session, at which freshmen were introduced to the undergraduate curriculum and possible majors. The Committee also held receptions after Union attractions, maintained a ride bureau, and published an activities calendar. Publicity produced attractive and eye-catching banners, posters, and flyers to publicize the Union's busy schedule.

international club

As proclaimed by its membership, the purposes of the International Club are: "... to foster mutual understanding between the students and personnel from foreign countries, the American students, and the local community; ... to encourage an exchange of ideas toward better international understanding; ... and to provide an effective means of communication between the members of the University community." Upon payment of dues, any member of the University—student, staff, faculty—is received into membership.

A serious discussion.

International relations.

International interests

Social and cultural exchange and just plain fun are incorporated into the Club's program. There are dinners, dances, picnics, panel discussions, athletic events, and foreign film festivals to broaden individual horizons. The Club works closely with the International Student Committee, a WSGA auxiliary, in organizing various fundraising projects. The proceeds from these activities are used to aid a foreign student in residence at the University.

Representing students in the Woman's College and the School of Nursing, WRA offers various opportunities for coeds to participate in both individual and team sports. Tournaments are held in badminton, table tennis, volleyball, basketball, bowling, and archery. Points are awarded to each individual and to each dormitory; certificates and trophies are awarded at the Spring Honors Assembly to those groups and individuals with the highest point-totals.

Activities and interest groups

In conjunction with other North Carolina colleges and high schools, WRA sponsored a Sports Day in the fall and again in spring. The program included volleyball and tennis tournaments, and tennis and swimming demonstrations. The annual Freshman Picnic during Orientation Week acquainted freshmen with the intramural program and featured a short skit by WRA members. Special interest groups under WRA auspices are: Nereidian, Terpsichorean, and Tennis Club.

neretidian

Since its organization over ten years ago, Nereidian has contributed, in large measure, to the success of the WRA program. The club promotes an interest in and the development of synchronized swimming skills, stunts, and diving.

Aquamajds and Aquacales

Weekly meetings and practice sessions in the pool enable the swimmers to perfect their routines for presentation in the annual Nereidian Water Show in March. Later in the spring, the aquamaids participated in the regional Synchronized Swimming Meet, held annually at Converse College, Spartanburg, South Carolina.

pre-medical society

The Pre-Medical Society and the program it implements are designed to help the pre-medical student bring his plans of a career in medicine into proper focus. Since undergraduate preparation is essential and basic experience for future work in medical school, the Society is now sponsoring a revised program, which is expected to give the prospective doctor a clearer picture of his future in medicine.

The Pre-Medical Program

A series of project tours is an important part of this new program. The tours present members of the Society with a comprehensive view of medical techniques, by having them observe actual practices, including operations and clinical and laboratory procedures in the various departments of Duke Hospital and the University Medical Center. The program also includes publication of the monthly, bench & bar

Offering counsel to students preparing for a career in the law has been the major concern of Bench and Bar throughout its thirty-year history on campus. In an effort to introduce its members to the subtleties and complexities of the legal profession, the society makes frequent use of films, lectures, mock trials, and other instructional aids.

An introduction to the law

Bench and Bar presented several speakers at its regular meetings during 1963-1964. Elvin R. Latty, Dean of the Duke Law School, C. Hilburn Womble, Assistant Dean of Undergraduate Men, a local attorney engaged in the current civil rights controversy, and representatives from leading national law firms presented their views and punctuated their talks with advice to future colleagues.

Bench and Bar members may use the facilities of the new Law Building.

The Duke chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers is designed to promote balanced growth and advancement on the part of the student engineer. ASCE provides opportunities for the beginning of professional associations, while demonstrating the practical applications of knowledge acquired in the classroom and the laboratory. Membership in the local chapter admits students to Society meetings and enables them to subscribe to ASCE publications, Transactions and Civil Engineer. The Society also publishes manuals of engineering practice, a directory, and an annual Official Register.

The Society's monthly program of movies, slides, and speakers acquaints members with new developments and opportunities in civil engineering. The ASCE meeting is also a forum for the presentation of papers and the discussion of engineering problems.

The Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps prepares selected students to help fill the officer needs of the United States Air Force in both regular and reserve units. The program consists of two years in basic and two years in advanced training. Organized in 1949, the AFROTC cadet corps is managed by the cadets themselves, as they advance from cadet airmen to cadet officers.

AFROTC activities

Several extracurricular activities are sponsored by the Air Force. Any interested cadet may join the Precision Drill Team. The local unit has, additionally, one of the few MARS amateur radio stations in the nation. The cadets also publish Contact, the corps newspaper. The unit is proud of its Arnold Air Society chapter, the national AFROTC honorary fraternity. Finally, all cadets are members of the Duke Air Force Club, which sponsors parties, picnics, and the Military Ball.

Established July 1, 1941, the Duke NROTC Unit had an initial enrollment of 100 students; the Unit today numbers 154 midshipmen, who are being trained as future officers in the United States Navy and Marine Corps.

The objectives of the Department of Naval Science are (1) to provide midshipmen with a rounded curriculum in basic naval courses which, with a bachelor's degree, will qualify them for a commission in the Navy; (2) to develop an interest in the Navy and to encourage a real understanding of Naval customs, traditions, and practices; (3) to develop leadership abilities through both precept and example; and (4) to introduce midshipmen to the Naval way of life through practical experience.

The local Unit includes the Regimental Band, Drill Team, and The Dolphin, a Unit newsletter. A Flight Indoctrination Program leading to a career in Naval Aviation is available to qualified senior midshipmen.

phi beta kappa

Phi Beta Kappa, founded on December 5, 1776, at the College of William and Mary, is the oldest honorary scholastic society in the United States. There are now 170 local chapters. The Duke chapter was chartered in 1919. Phi Beta Kappa's emphasis is on the liberal arts and sciences, and it leaves to other organizations the recognition of academic success in other fields.

To be considered for election, undergraduate students must have a 3.30 quality-point average for six semesters while earning a minimum of 90 semester hours. Elections are made in October, February, and during Commencement Week. At the Commencement meeting, a limited number of Ph.D. candidates are elected.

Conceived and inaugurated exactly thirty years ago, Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities has a dual purpose; the publication provides recognition for deserving students and also serves as a valuable reference guide and file for employers. Committees of administrative officers and faculty members in institutions across the country nominate candidates. Selection is ultimately based on scholarship, citizenship, leadership, participation in campus activities, and general service. The fifty-eight students whose names appear below have, by their superior records, indicated that they may be assets to the community upon graduation.

omicron delta kappa

Omicron Delta Kappa is a national honorary for senior men who have distinguished themselves by demonstrated leadership ability, personal character, and service rendered to the University. In recognizing men who have attained a high level of success, Omicron Delta Kappa hopes to inspire others to strive for conspicuous excellence in similar fashion.

Bringing together men representing all areas of collegiate life, the honorary hopes, additionally, to create an organization which will help to mold University opinion on questions of local and/or intercollegiate concern. To further this latter aim, Omicron Delta Kappa sponsored a student-faculty retreat and a dinner meeting with President Douglas M. Knight.

phi kappa delta

Phi Kappa Delta is a senior honorary, which recognizes those members of the Woman's College who have, demonstrably, met high standards of scholarship, leadership, and service to the University community. Founded in 1944 by Omicron Delta Kappa, the "brother" fraternity on West Campus, Phi Kappa Delta frequently holds joint meetings with ODK.

Both groups assembled in the fall for dinner with President Douglas Knight. At Phi Kappa Delta meetings on Sunday evenings, campus problems were discussed, and a booklet containing biographical sketches of members of the administration and faculty was outlined for publication next year.

The sophomore women's leadership honorary, Sandals, was organized in 1932 as an auxiliary of the Women's Student Government Association. Sandals members are concerned with stimulating intellectual achievement and social development. They also aid, in whatever ways possible, various campus organizations.

The year's activities included helping during Orientation Week, ushering at Freshman Assemblies, working with the Homecoming Committee, and assisting WSGA with Pay Day collections. With Beta Omega Sigma, its West Campus counterpart, Sandals co-sponsored afternoon teas during the Symposium; a tea was also given for Trustees of the University in the spring. A Sandals' scholarship is awarded each year to an outstanding rising sophomore.

Organized forty-seven years ago to recognize leadership potential, Beta Omega Sigma taps men from the rising sophomore class each spring who have excelled in scholarship, leadership and service to the University. The honorary attempts to arouse student interest and participation in campus affairs and to develop individual responsibility.

Beta Omega Sigma members work

“behind the scenes” during Homecoming, assisting in the election of the Homecoming Queen and her coronation. They also serve as representatives of the University, welcoming returning alumni and visiting educators. BOS is also prepared to serve, when called upon by the Administration or by the Men’s Student Government Association.

ivy

Founded in 1937 by the Woman's College Class of 1940, Ivy encourages scholarship and intellectual achievement among freshman women. Membership requirements are a 3.5 average either for the first semester or for both semesters of the freshman year. Members are, accordingly, tapped after the first semester of their freshman year or in the fall of their sophomore year.

With its West Campus counterpart,

Phi Eta Sigma, Ivy sponsored a banquet honoring all freshmen with a 3.0 average at mid-semester. Other activities included welcoming and guiding high-school students on campus for the Angier B. Duke Scholarship Finalists' Weekend and presenting the Dorm Scholarship Cup—won this year by Alspaugh House—awarded annually to the East Campus house with the highest academic average.

phi eta sigma

Setting, by example, high standards for academic leadership, Phi Eta Sigma, national sophomore honorary, recognizes and encourages excellence in scholarship. Freshmen who attain a 3.5 quality point ratio for the first semester or a 3.5 average for the entire freshman year are eligible for membership. The honorary publishes a list of tutors, both student and professional, for the benefit of the undergraduate student body. An annual banquet, sponsored by Phi Eta Sigma and Ivy, honors all freshmen who have earned a "B" average at mid-semester.

arnold air society

The William A. Sally Squadron of the Arnold Air Society was established at Duke in 1950. The Arnold Air Society is the national AFROTC honorary founded, in 1944, in honor of General "Hap" Arnold, Commander of the Army Air Forces in World War II. The purpose of the honorary is to honor both Advanced and Basic Cadets who have maintained an overall 2.0 average and have demonstrated outstanding leadership ability.

The Society assists in enrolling prospective cadets in the AFROTC program during Orientation Week. In the spring, Sally Squadron members are in charge of the annual AFROTC drill competition, held in Raleigh. The Squadron hopes to again begin instruction for members of the Civil Air Patrol and to organize an Angel Flight, a coed auxiliary.

corsairs society

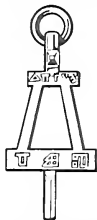

The Corsairs Society was founded in 1958 to recognize significant student contributions to the NROTC program. The aims of the Society are to honor outstanding midshipmen, to increase esprit de corps within the NROTC

Unit, and to stimulate local interest in the Navy. Membership is open to juniors and seniors who have maintained a 3.0 average in Naval Science courses and an overall 2.0 average.

tau beta pi

Tau Beta Pi recognizes academic excellence and exemplary character traits demonstrated by students in the College of Engineering. The top twelve per cent of the junior engineering class and the top twenty per cent of the senior engineering class are eligible for membership. The local chapter, established in January, 1948, also honors alumni as well as undergraduates.

As a service to freshmen, the society sponsored a series of lectures on the slide rule - its operation and uses in engineering. Tau Beta Pi also studied classroom procedure and evaluated the current academic atmosphere, with emphasis given to the needs of the student engineer. Tapping of new members, followed by an initiation banquet, is on a biannual basis. New inductees are asked to write a 500-1,500-word essay on a non-technical subject. Each chapter awards a prize to the best pledge essay; these, in turn, are entered in national competition, where the best themes are reprinted in Bent, the Tau Beta Pi quarterly. The national society also awards several fellowships, paid for by contributions from industry.

alpha kappa psi

Peta Eta Chapter of the largest and oldest professional business fraternity was chartered in 1929. The society furthers student-faculty relations by inviting outstanding professors in the several departments to speak on topics in their areas of concentration. Moreover, the group hopes to advance its membership from a purely theoretical grasp of its discipline to a real understanding of the mechanics of the business world. Through a series of informal discussions with leading local businessmen and similar programs, members witness closeup the problems they may expect to face.

Accepting business, accounting, and economics majors with a 2.0 overall average, Alpha Kappa Psi affords members a chance to improve their academic standing and to derive personal satisfaction from their work. The attempt is also made to aid the public in appreciating and demanding high standards in commerce, accounts, and finance.

In 1932, Dr. and Mrs. Neal Dow organized "Le Salon Français," an informal group for students interested in France—its language, literature, history, traditions, and contributions to Western culture. "Le Salon" has since become the Alpha chapter of Tau Psi Omega, national French honorary. A 3.0 average in French, a 2.0 overall average, and "reasonable" fluency in the language are prerequisites for membership.

A French table, "La Table Française," convenes each Tuesday evening in the East Campus Union. This weekly gathering is open to all students who may wish to further their knowledge of things French. Alpha Chapter also sponsors several French picnics and assists Mme. Dow in the annual production of a major French play, which features an all-student cast.

sigma delta pi

The Spanish honorary, Sigma Delta Pi, was founded in 1948 to advance learning in Spanish and to cultivate "el amor por todo lo noble y bello que haya salido de la venerable Espana." Prerequisites for admission are a 3.0 average in Spanish through Spanish 91 and an overall quality-point-ratio of 2.85.

Highlights of the year were the fall initiation of new members, followed by a banquet and a speech by Dr. Bruce Wardropper, and the spring picnic at the home of the group's advisor, Dr. Juan Castellano. Other special activities included a mixer for prospective members at the beginning of the fall term and parties at Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Through its activities, Sigma Delta Pi hopes to instill in its members a greater appreciation of Hispanic contributions to world culture and to provide a program for those with special interest and aptitude in the language and culture of Spanish-speaking countries.

kappa delta pi

The local chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, national education honorary, was founded on campus thirty-six years ago. The organization encourages high personal, professional, and intellectual standards and recognizes the contributions made by those who plan to teach. To be eligible for membership, juniors, seniors, and graduate students must rank in the upper fifth of their class and must maintain a "B" average in education courses. To prepare teachers to meet the changes and challenges which may be expected in education in the future, Kappa Delta Pi holds monthly meetings and luncheons, to which noted guest speakers are invited.

pi mu epsilon

North Carolina Alpha, the local chapter of Pi Mu Epsilon, was founded in 1932 to promote interest and scholarship among engineering students and those majoring in science and/or mathematics. To effect its aims, the honorary elects members twice annually according to their performance in mathematics. Membership requirements are a 3.0 average in mathematics, through twelve semester hours and two years of calculus, and an overall 3.0 average.

At the induction ceremonies, professors and senior mathematics majors discuss developments and opportunities in mathematics and the related technical fields. Pi Mu Epsilon also sponsors several lectures during the year, featuring guest speakers.

In April, 1959, eight senior civil engineering students and a representative of the College of Engineering faculty founded Delta Chi Epsilon, a local scholastic honorary. This local body successfully petitioned for membership in Chi Epsilon, the national civil engineering honorary and, having been accepted, received its charter on February 28, 1964.

"Dedicated to the purpose of maintaining and promoting the status of civil engineering as a . . . profession," Chi Epsilon was organized to recognize the characteristics of the successful engineer and to aid its members in developing these same characteristics. At the same time, the group promotes the extension and the exercise of technical skills.

To qualify for membership, the civil engineering student must rank in the upper fifth of the junior class or in the upper third of the senior class,

Generally, the purposes of the society are to promote and reward scholarship in electrical engineering. Juniors and seniors at the head of their respective classes, and of proven character and ability, are considered for election to Eta Kappa Nu. With its ideals of leadership, scholarship, and integrity, the organization works to achieve better student-faculty relations and to assist the College of Engineering and its student body where and when possible.

order of hippocrates

Chartered in 1955, the Order of Hippocrates, the Duke pre-medical honorary, amended its constitution in January to allow the tapping of any pre-medical student, even those who may not be members of the Pre-Medical Society. The Order recognizes those who have compiled outstanding scholastic records. To be eligible, a student must have completed 75 semester hours, with an overall 3.0 average and a 3.0 average in the pre-medical sciences.

With its "new look," the Order has become an active organization, one which performs many useful services for future physicians. Members contribute articles to Caduceus, the pre-medical monthly, and edit, in conjunction with the office of the Dean of Undergraduate Men, a handbook for pre-medical students. In the future, members of the Order will serve as student advisors to underclassmen in the Pre-Medical Society.

Members: President Bernell Stone, T. Dankel, D. Hess, J. Sites, W. Ackernecht, R. Barr, J. Buckley, S. Clay, D. Coolidge, A. Hutzler, R. McLean, S. Myers, E. Keller, J. Cook, J. Hobbs, H. Henry, N. Kent, R. Rau, S. Buckner, K. Benson, J. Roidiger, C. Phelan.

Sigma Pi Sigma honors students of demonstrated proficiency in physics. To qualify for membership, a student must maintain an overall 3.0 average and a 3.0 in physics, with at least eleven hours work in the field. Under the leadership of a new faculty advisor, Dr. Richard Walter, the honorary this year sponsored formal and informal gatherings, where students might meet and hear lectures by distinguished physicists. Picnics were held in the fall and in the spring.

pi sigma alpha

MEMBERS: D. Damschroder, E. Fraser, J. Geckeler, M. Heald, G. Holsinger, N. Kimmerle, P. Kozicki, H. Low, M. Meadors, B. Neblett, M. Pittman, S. Robertson, L. Rogers, V. Sellers, R. Sutch, M. Rollins, Steve Salisbury, President R. Sheheen, L. Siegel, J. Truesdell, R. Vickery.

The national political science honor fraternity, Pi Sigma Alpha, fosters student interest in governmental activities and attempts to create an awareness of public affairs by focusing on current issues. To qualify for membership, a student must maintain a 3.0 average with 10 semester hours in the department. Gamma Theta Chapter this year held an open forum, "The Coalition Crises," led by Dr. Kulski, Visiting Professor of Russian Affairs.

pi tau sigma

Pi Iota Chapter of Pi Tau Sigma has, since its founding in May, 1944, stressed the high ideals of the engineering profession and the cultivation of those attributes necessary for effective professional leadership. The honorary recognizes "... those men in the study and the profession of mechanical engineering who, by their academic or practical achievements, manifest a real interest and marked ability in their chosen work."

theta alpha phi

Reactivated locally in 1958, North Carolina Alpha of Theta Alpha Phi is concerned with stimulating interest in the dramatic arts and developing an active theater on campus. Students who have made significant contributions to the stage through acting or the exercise of allied skills are inducted as members at the beginning of each semester; initiation also occurs twice annually.

delta phi rho alpha

Delta Phi Rho Alpha, a local honorary for women established forty-three years ago, recognizes athletic leadership. Above and beyond this purpose, the organization encourages participation in sports, while helping to create spectator interest in the athletic programs of the Woman's College. Volleyball and basketball games between East and West were tentatively arranged to call attention to the group's aims.

A local honorary and service organization, Delta Mu Tau, was established in 1962, when Kappa Kappa Psi, the national band fraternity, became inactive. The members of Delta

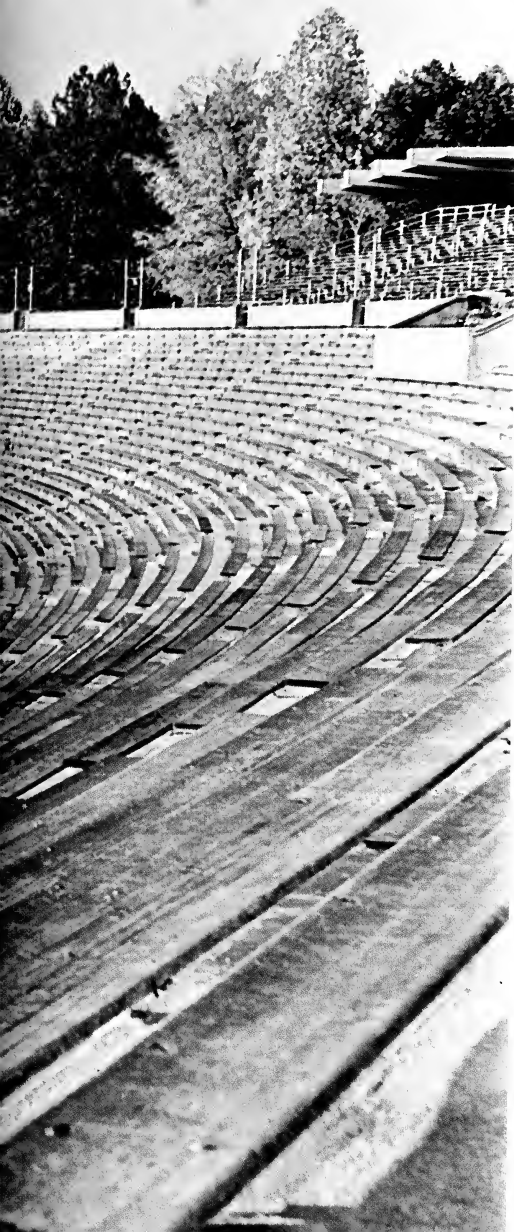

Mu Tau usher at concerts, sponsor fund-raising activities for the Delta Mu Tau Scholarship, and may meet with visiting artists—Susan Starr, members of the New York Woodwind and Brass Quintet and others. The social highlight of the year was a Christmas dinner with the faculty of the Music Department.

There is something quite special about Duke athletics. When the last whistle has sounded, when the faithful have filed out of the cavernous hole in Methodist Flats or the stolid, spacious-but-cramped Indoor Stadium, some intangible element remains. It is a fifth essence, part memory, part lasting emotion, almost a state of mind. This elusive, indefinable, though precious quality must be added to the glittering roster of greats—Wade, Parker, McAfee, Hill, Sime, Groat, Moorman, McGee, Souchak, Wall, Heyman, Wilkinson, Mullins—and to the moments of glory down through the years. It is present when alumni regroup, when students celebrate, when the cheers go up, when the grit and glamor fade. It is a special commitment that is demanded, a unique, undying devotion. For we, too, are Duke athletics.

DURHAM, September 21. Hard running and a pinpoint-sharp passing attack enabled the Blue Devils to overcome an early South Carolina lead and start the season on a winning note. Led by Quarterbacks Dave Uible and Scotty Glacken, the green Duke squad outplayed their more experienced but fumbling opponents.

The Gamecocks elected to receive the opening kickoff: with Dan Reeves at the helm, they marched 71 yards for the touchdown. Early in the second period, Mike Curtis cut the South Carolina lead in half with a 30-yard field-goal. While Curtis' kickoff was in the air, a controversial offensive holding penalty gave Duke the ball on the visitors' 47. Six plays later, Curtis crashed over from 1-yard out, and Duke took a 9-6 lead.

Kept deep in their own territory by Rod Stewart's booming punts and a tenacious Duke defense, the Gamecock offense stalled. In the third quarter, a 14-yard pass from Glacken to Stan Crisson capped a 70-yard touchdown drive, and, in the final period, Curtis bulled over from the 1, running the Blue Devil lead to 22-6. With four minutes remaining, the Gamecocks rallied for a final touchdown.

Dave Uible, the promising senior quarterback whose career was halted by an unfortunate injury, is brought down by a Gamecock tackler.

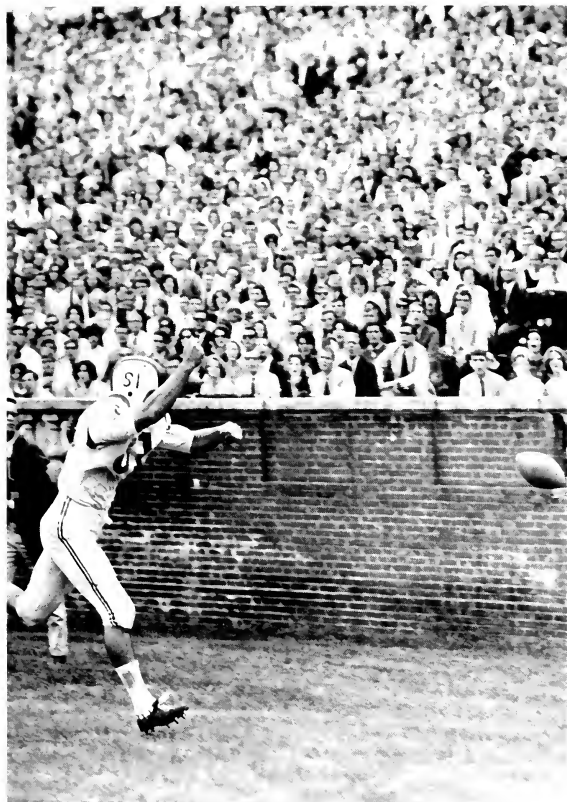

CHARLOTTESVILLE, September 28. Facing their first road test, the youthful Blue Devils responded with a convincing win over the Cavaliers. The fine quarterbacking of sophomore Scotty Glacken and the return to form of senior halfback Jay Wilkinson highlighted Coach Bill Murray's 200th victory.

An early Duke threat ended at the Virginia 10-yard line, but the Devils managed to pick up two points on a safety. Duke maintained this narrow margin until early in the second quarter, when a Cavalier fumble and Wilkinson's 64-yard touchdown gallop turned a close contest into a rout. Glacken replaced Dave Uible, the game senior who suffered a season-ending knee injury, and directed the Devils to their second touchdown, tossing 15 yards to Stan Crisson and upping the Duke lead to 16-0 at the half.

Duke opened the third quarter with a 75-yard touchdown march, capped by Curtis' 1-yard plunge. Minutes later, Bill Baird intercepted a pass and returned it 40 yards to the Virginia 23. Pass interference put the ball on the 2-yard line, where Glacken skipped into the end zone for the final Duke score. The Virginians garnered 8 points in the closing minutes, as the Duke bench was emptied.

RICHMOND, October 5. The Blue Devils scored their 11th consecutive ACC victory before 22,000 City Stadium fans and a national television audience, coming on like a tropical storm in the final quarter to blow Maryland out of the Tobacco Bowl. In the first period, the Devils and the Terrapins exchanged touchdowns, but an extra-point and a field-goal gave Duke a 10-6 lead at the half.

Taking the opening kickoff, the Blues rolled for 75 yards in 14 plays. Glacken rolled around end for the touchdown. The Terps struck back quickly, on a scoring pass from Dick Shiner to Darryl Hill. Billy Futrell returned the kickoff 64 yards, to put the Dukes within field-goal range. Mike Glacken and Crison collaborated on an electrifying 60-yard touchdown pass. Minutes later, the Devils lit up the scoreboard again, sweeping 48 yards in 10 plays, with Wilkinson sprinting the final 5 yards. Maryland was forced into a punt situation, and sophomore John Gutekunst raced back 76 yards to complete the the scoring.

BERKELEY, October 12. The Blue Devils had to settle for a tie in a wild skirmish with the Golden Bears. In the first period of play, Glacken passed to Wilkinson for a TD; Cal also scored through the air. During the second quarter, Billy Futrell charged over from the 3 to run the score to 14-7 at the half.

The Dukes faltered in the third period. Glacken's touchdown pass to Wilkinson was called back for offensive interference. A field-goal attempt was short and downed on the 10. The Bears were forced into a punt situation; the snap from center sailed into the endzone, presenting the Devils with a safety and two points. Not to be outdone, the Dukes fumbled the kickoff on their own 34, and the Bears crossed the goal in 4 plays. The PAT

DURHAM, October 19. Gridiron immortals, the 1938 Iron Dukes — unbeaten, untied, and unscored upon in regular season play — looked on, while their heirs rolled to an exciting Homecoming win over Clemson. Many observers felt that the game was the greatest passing duel ever in Duke Stadium.

The 1963 Dukes exploded early, as Glacken flipped a screen-pass to Wilkinson, and Jay, voted "Back of the Week" by the Associated Press, outmaneuvered eleven Tigers to score. Curtis added the PAT. After threats by both squads went for naught, Clemson returned a punt to the Duke 26 and went on to tie at 7-7. The Devils and Wilkinson bounced right back. Jay returned the kickoff to the 28, where Glacken passed to Crisson for the score. Clemson's Hugh Mauldin dashed 50 yards to the 12, before Bob Jamieson ran him out of bounds. The Tigers settled for a field-goal.

With Clemson in possession again, Mark Caldwell intercepted a pass and scooted 44 yards to the 10, where, again, Glacken hit Crisson. Down by 21-10, Frank Howard's boys reeled off a 68-yard scoring pass to close the gap to 21-17 at the half. On the first play of the third period, Wilkinson rolled out, faked the pass, and just kept on rolling 67 yards to score. Alex Bell converted. After trading touchdowns, it looked like gravy for the Blues with only 3:55 to play. But frantic passing by the Tigers kept the outcome in doubt until the final gun.

It was a long afternoon in Kiddick Stadium. Coach Murray and Jay Wilkinson, Duke's leading rusher, anxiously survey the action and map an offensive counter-attack.

RALEIGH, October 26. The Blue Devils' thirteen-game Atlantic Coast Conference winning streak was rudely halted in ancient Kiddick Stadium by an emotionally charged, Liberty Bowl-bound North Carolina State Wolfpack. The State victory was the first 'Pack win over Duke since 1946.

The Wolfpack forward wall, led by Don Montgomery and Bert Wilder, and the Duke defensive brigade, headed by Captain Chuck Walker and Mike Curtis, battled to a standstill during the first fifteen minutes. Neither team was able to move the ball efficiently or consistently.

Early in the second quarter, the home forces reeled off a sustained drive of 80 yards; Tony Koszarsky crashed over from 6 yards out for the score. A 55-yard run by Mike Clark sparked the drive. With only a minute left to play in the half, Quarterback Jim Rossi galloped 55 yards and followed up his own effort by pitching 39 yards to Joe Scarpati in the endzone, stretching the State lead to 14-0.

In the second half, the Blue Devils picked up 8 first downs. But the name of the game is "Score," and the Dukes failed in this department until the final quarter, when the issue was fairly well decided. Scotty Glacken, rushed hard all afternoon, tossed 19 yards to Stan Crisson, setting the stage for the lone Duke touchdown, a 37-yard pass to Jay Wilkinson.

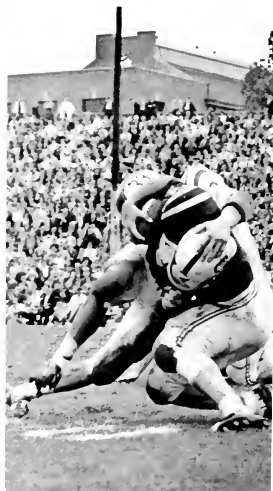

A desperate effort to overcome

State's 7-point advantage went awry. The Devils continued to strike through the air, but the strategy backfired, as Montgomery picked off a stray aerial bomb and returned it 11 yards in to the endzone, clinching the State victory.

ATLANTA, November 2. Hampered by injuries, bad breaks, and spotty play, the Blue Devils succumbed to a well-oiled machine, headed by Billy Lothridge and manned by a strong supporting cast. In the opening minutes, it looked like an upset might be brewing; sharp on both offense and defense, the Blues had the Techmen well in hand. Driving 64 yards in 10 plays, the Dukes jumped to a 6-0 lead. Halfback John Lucas rushed over from the 4; the PAT attempt failed.

Off to a slow start, the Engineers finally began to move. They drove 70 yards in 7 plays and went ahead 7-6, when Lothridge's PAT was on target. 5:30 showed on the clock, when an Billy Futrell flashes through a hole opened by Fred Cromartie.

Down 13-6 at the start of the third quarter, the Devils moved the ball well, driving deep into Tech territory, only to stall on 4th down and inches to go. Then the roof collapsed. Lothridge passed for two TD's, converted twice and added another field-goal to break the NCAA record for field-goals in a career.

An obviously disappointed Bill Murray said, after the defeat: "We came into this ball game feeling we had an excellent chance to win. . . . It's just a shame to have so much overall team effort spoiled by a few mistakes. . . . We went at them as well as we have anybody, but poor play at times killed our chances." Injuries to key personnel set back the Duke cause. Workhorse Mike Curtis was injured on the second play of the game; Billy Futrell went to the sidelines in the first quarter, and John Lucas and Bob Jamieson joined him in the second quarter.

DURHAM, November 9. Six interceptions and six Duke touchdowns more than compensated for the fact that Wake Forest nudged across its second touchdown of the season at the expense of the Blues, as the Devils demolished the Demon Deacons.

The home forces gathered in an easy six points early in the "contest," when Rod Stewart blocked a punt, and an alert Stan Crisson pounced on the loose ball in the end zone. The Deacon quarterback, Karl Sweetan, then engineered a 59-yard scoring drive and kicked the PAT to catapult the visitors

The Devils increased their 20-7 half-time lead in the third period, marching 61 yards. Again it was Wilkinson, scoring at will, carrying for six points. Rich Kraft and Jim Luciano both scored in the final fifteen minutes, as Duke waltzed to a 27-point "victory."

With Billy Futrell and Mike Curtis sidelined by injuries sustained in the Tech game, Biff Bracy, performing for the first time at full-strength, took up the slack and relieved the "pressure" on Wilkinson. While the Deacons keyed their defenses on Wilkinson, who, notwithstanding, had a field day, Bracy easily swept around the ends for 65 yards in 7 carries, setting up several scores.

Led by Rod Stewart, Chuck Walker, and Bob Davis, the Duke line charges in to block a Wake punt. After the game, one fan was heard to ask if the hapless Deacons were still in the ACC. The following week, the Deacs broke the victory last with a 20-19 win over South Carolina.

into a short-lived 7-6 lead. With 35 seconds remaining in the first quarter, Jay Wilkinson returned a Wake punt 72 yards for what proved to be the winning touchdown. In the second quarter, the Dukes negotiated 71 yards in 9 plays, as Glacken flipped a 9-yard touchdown pass to Wilkinson.

DURHAM, November 16. Duke's determined effort to tip the Navy victory canoe fell short, as Heisman Trophy winner Roger Staubach steered the nation's second-ranked team to a 38-25 win.

Wayne Hardin's forces wasted no time, marching 68 yards for a touchdown the first time they had possession. Staubach cruised around end for the final 5 yards. The Blue Devils countered with a balanced running and passing attack in a 64-yard drive, as Halfback Biff Bracy rambled into paydirt. Sparked by Staubach's 44-yard run, Navy scored again on a plunge by Johnny Sai. Now it was the Devils' turn again, with Scotty Glacken directing his team downfield and scoring himself from 5 yards out. Navy added a field-goal, but Glacken threw to Stan Crisson for 11 yards and 6 points. With five minutes to go in the first half, Duke held a 19-17 lead. Then the blistering Navy attack shifted into high gear; the Middies drove 68 yards in 5 plays for the go-ahead touchdown. The next thirty minutes proved to be a stand-off. Both coaches adjusted their defenses, and neither team could move the ball with any great success. The Devils advanced across midfield on several occasions, but failed to pick up key first downs. DURHAM, November 28. For the third straight year, a field-goal made the difference in the Duke-Carolina Classic. This year, as fate would have it, the field-goal, the game, the ACC title, and a Gator Bowl invitation belonged to the 'Heels.

Neither team could manage a sustained drive in the first quarter. On the strength of Willard's legs, Edge's underrated arm, and Lacey's over-rated hands, the Tarheels scored in the second period and held a 7-0 advantage at the half. Midway in the third quarter, their pro-set, control offense enabled the visitors to gain a 14-0 lead. Then, to the delight of the faithful, sensational Scotty Glacken found a hole in the vaunted Carolina pass defense and flipped to Billy Futrell, who streaked 70 yards for the TD. The Duke soccer team, 1963 edition, finished with a frustrating record of 3 wins, 6 losses, and 1 tie. A single goal spelled defeat no less than three times. Co-Captains Davey Jones and Alex Epanchin led the team on the field and in the post-season honors derby. Halfback Jones was voted "most valuable player" by his teammates, while Forward Epanchin was named to the 4th Team All America.

The Devils opened the campaign at home against an overrated Washington University squad and out-kicked the visitors, 5-3. The following three games were also against non-league competition, but the Blymen ran into some hard-nosed opposition. Davidson managed a tense 3-2 win, and then Trenton State Teachers College and West Chester both defeated the touring Duke team, 3-2 and 2-0.

tough 3-2 setback in the mud, at the feet of Virginia. Powerful Maryland, never defeated by an ACC opponent, handily disposed of the Devils, 4-0. Following a 4-1 loss to Lynchburg, Duke went to Chapel Hill for the game with UNC. The fired-up Blues scored first and played well, but Carolina forced the Devils to settle for a 1-1 tie.

Other fine performers were Fullback Larry Siegel and Goalie Mike Frisman, anchoring a defense that was much tougher than the balance-sheet might indicate. Halfback John Morton, Captain-elect, played a hard, hustling game all year long. Colt Hough and Jim Boericke provided additional scoring punch as members of the front line.

The harriers finished the season a close second to North Carolina in the ACC Meet. After suffering only one defeat in regular dual-meet competition (also to North Carolina), the Iron Dukes saw their hopes for the Conference championship go up in smoke for the fourth straight year.

The season opened with a triangular meet, as the Devils beat N. C. State and lost, by the slimmest of margins, to Wake Forest, 27-28. Bob Waite finished first, turning in a 22:23 performance. Sophomore Randy Repass placed 4th, and George Flowers and Nick Gray took 8th and 9th respectively. After a triangular meet with South Carolina and Virginia was cancelled, the Dukes moved on to conquer Maryland for the second straight year by the same score—25-30. The Terps' Kreuger took first, but John Weisiger ran 2nd, Repass 3rd, Flowers 5th, and Waite 6th. The Dukes then eked past Clemson, 27-28. George Flowers romped home first, with Weisiger following in 3rd, Repass in 6th, and Waite in 7th place. In the final dual meet of the season, the Ironmen lost to Carolina. Two Tarheel thin-clads tied for first, with Bob Waite and John Weisiger right behind in 2nd and 3rd places. George Flowers, a strong contender, was forced to drop out of the race after 300 yards owing to sudden illness. Repass placed 7th, Gray 8th, and Dave Johnson finished 13th. Four days later, after having lost 21-36, Duke placed a distant second to the 'Heels, 33-65, in the State Meet. Weisiger placed 6th, Repass 10th, Gray 11th, Johnson 15th, and Flowers 23rd.

It was a stolid, determined Duke team, bent upon an upset, that entered the ACC Meet. Before the race, Coach Al Buehler remarked: "The story of our team this year is that we have never had five men doing what they are capable of doing, and I don't mean superhuman effort." Superhuman effort was what was needed. The outcome was in doubt until the final half-mile. Fighting for the lead, Weisiger injured his leg at this point, leaving UNC's Maillet unchallenged for top honors. The Dukes still ran well, though, with Bob Waite in the 8th spot, Flowers 12th, Nick Gray 14th, Repass 16th, and Johnson 18th. Carolina won, 52-68. Coach Buehler has commended Billy Rose and Bill Weldon, who placed 1-2 in the race against the Clemson freshmen. Buehler added: "They will be a great asset to the varsity next year."

basketball

With no intention of downgrading swimming, wrestling, and fencing, the term "winter sport" has, of late, come to mean "basketball." Nothing, it is said, succeeds like success. It might be added that nothing is more difficult than to be successful consistently. And yet, in the past two years, Duke's basketball team has finished third, and now second in the nation. The obvious question is "Why?" To find the answer, you need only consider one man, we should say gentleman, and his name is Victor Albert Bubas. More about his feats later. Now to the story of the team that came within twenty minutes or so of being the NCAA Champion.

THE GAME Victory, for which there is no substitute, was so close you could almost taste it, but the NCAA Championship slipped through anxious hands. Jeff Mullins was every inch an All-American in a losing effort.

Back before the season began, the usual predictions and forecasts were made. In November, as is his way, Coach Bubas laid it on the line. He called December and its near-impossible schedule "the most challenging month" in Duke basketball history, not without some basis. There was the problem of replacing Art Heyman, 1963 Player of the Year and All-Everything. Actually, there wasn't any problem here at all. You just don't replace Heyman. You do try to get along without him. Your job is made easier, however, with the likes of Jeff Mullins, Jay Buckley, Buzzy Harrison, and a host of others. Pressed for honest self-appraisal, Coach Bubas gave out with:

"We'll have a good club. We'll have good speed and good depth.

Coach Vic Bubas, the man largely responsible for Duke's phenomenal success on the hardwood, calls a time-out to devise strategy.

"At the forwards . . . from Lexington, Kentucky . . . Number 44 . . . Captain Jeff Mullins. . . ."

Our scoring will be better balanced. We may not be as explosive as last year and perhaps not as productive—but we should do all right." (Understatement of the year—ed.) "Our No. 1 objective, of course, will be to win the ACC Championship. Our style will be the same as last season. We'll run when we can—and we are experimenting with a few new things to see how they work out. We'll probably use the man-to-man defense more this year, although we still believe in the multiple offense and defense. In this connection, our defense could be stronger than any year I've been at Duke." The team was, then, called upon to find itself, while taking on some rough customers, and to make as few mistakes as possible in the process, which is asking for a lot. But this, as many were to learn, was no ordinary team.

When the wraps were finally taken off and the latest model of the Duke basketball machine put on display for the first time, the results were generally promising. Here was Penn State, a team picked to make some noise in Eastern basketball circles.

Here was Jeff Mullins—if he has a weakness, Villanova's Jack Kraft would appreciate hearing about it. And here, finally, was the end of the ball game, with Penn State on the short end of the stick, 92-62. Mullins canned 25—not bad for a start.

Although it was only the second game of the season, you would have thought, by the rousing send-off, that the NCAA Championship was at stake right then and there. The Devils were on the road for the first time, on a junket to Morgantown, West Virginia, to meet perennial basketball powers West Virginia and Ohio State. The team came away with top honors in the West Virginia Centennial Tournament, beating Ohio State by 1 and West Virginia by 5. Mullins' two-game point-total was 60, which is okay in anybody's book. The point was made in Morgantown that you must have rebounding strength, especially against fellows like Gary Bradds, Tom Lowry, et. al. Still on the road, the Devils tasted defeat for the first time. A little Vanderbilt guard, name of John Ed Miller looked ten feet high, as he pumped in 30 points from all over the

and Bill Buntin made believers of the Duke faithful. The Wolverines played as if they invented rebounding, killing the Devils off the boards, and, face it, it just wasn't our night. You can't keep a good team down, though, as Messrs. Russell and Buntin were to find out in Kansas City.

From Ann Arbor to New Orleans and the Sugar Bowl Tournament. The first night was easy, as Auburn outshuffled itself, 84-67. Jeff Mullins followed up his 22 points against Michigan with 23 against the Plainsmen. If you look at anything but the score, the next night in Mardigrasville was easy too. The Devils outshot, outrebounded, and outthusted the Wildcats from Kentucky, then the top-ranked team in the nation. But somehow, and we are still trying to figure this one out, Duke lost, 81-79. Hack Tison, who had missed the Michigan debacle because of illness, was very much in the lineup against Baron Rupp's boys. Coming into his own, Hack tossed in 27.

Before the mid-season break for exams, the Dukes fattened up their record at the expense of Conference opposition, such as it was. Ailing Everett Case, the man responsible for big-time basketball in Tarheelia, brought his deceptively sick-looking Wolfpack to Duke. Of late, State has not had anything to compare with its famous teams of the mid-fifties, but never, on any account, is the "Grey Fox" to be taken lightly, especially when he meets his former pupil, Vic Bubas. Things were a little tense in the first half. State played its game—slow-down, wait-for-the-good-shot. It almost worked, as the ball was worked in to Larry Lakins for easy lay-ups. But in the second half, class began to tell: with Mullins pacing the attack, Duke exploded and blew the Wolfpack right off the court. Then there was a dangerous excursion to "Death Valley," South Carolina. It was close, but Duke was not inclined to be upset. In another top performance, Hack Tison hit for 25. And that was all she wrote, 81-75. Then it was Carolina's turn. Carolina pundits had been booming the Billy Cunningham bandwagon. They pulled out all the stops—"Kanga-court. The Dukes were embarrassed, in overtime, 97-92. Jay Buckley was high scorer for our side with 23.

Opening the defense of their ACC title, the Devils methodically disposed of Clemson, 75-52. Jay Buckley again took scoring honors for Duke, flipping in 21. It was a little different in Columbia, South Carolina; the Gamecocks decided that weren't up for rolling over and playing dead, even if you did have DUKE written across the front of your uniform. The Collins boys made it close, too close, at times, but Duke prevailed, 77-70. Mullins was back on the beam, this time with 26 points. A third Conference foe, Virginia, found little truth in the famous line "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus." Saint Nick missed Charlottesville this year, and it was a long night for the Cavaliers, as the home-standing Dukes pinned them with an 84-73 loss.

It is quite one thing to talk like a world-beater, quite another to act like one. Michigan's Cazzie Russell roo Kid," "best ever at UNC," "All-America," etc. Coach Dean Smith pulled Cunningham into the back-court to control the ball, set up a patterned offense, and draw Buckley and Tison out from under the basket. Well, sir, Tison came out and covered Cunningham like a blanket. Billy got only 14 points and looked like he forgot how to jump. Tison got 23, Jeff was there with 25, and Carolina went down, 84-64.

Duke fans were remembering what happened to West Virginia (annihilation), when Duke met the Mountaineers after a two-week break for exams in 1963. In 1964, the Devils met Tennessee and barely escaped with their lives. Scouting reports indicated that we would be happy to win. Happy and lucky. On a neutral court in Greensboro, the Volunteers were plenty tough. They grabbed the lead late in the second half, on the strength of some fantastic shooting by Danny Schultz. With about a minute to go and a 5-point deficit, it looked like curtains. But with the aid of a succession of minor miracles, Duke tied it and won in double overtime. The key play came with seconds left, when Denny Ferguson dove for the ball; in one motion, he took it away from Schultz and flipped it to Buzzy Harrison, who loved it in. That seemed to take some of the starch out of the Vois.

Duke really began to roll. South Carolina paid a visit to Durham and was manhandled, 80-67. Navy came to town and was slaughtered. It may have had something to do with a loss in football. It was shameful, nonetheless, with a new school scoring record to boot 121-63. Shell-shocked, the Middies departed. Over in Raleigh, it was, as always, touch-and-go with State. But Tison contributed 19 to spell defeat for the 'Pack. Against Maryland, it was strictly no contest, 104-72. With 25 against the 'Terps, Mullins added another 25 at the expense of Virginia in Charlottesville. Duke 80, Virginia 59.

Interest and speculation were at a peak, and emotions a little raw, when "the game" finally arrived. It was billed as a David and Goliath affair, little Davidson against mighty Duke. Which is so much nonsense, since it only takes five men to play the game.

Hack Tison (in the foreground) looks on as Jay Buckley lofts a sweeping hook.

Mullins, with 29 points, prevailed over Fred Hetzel in the duel of All-America nominees. But it takes more than one man, and Duke proved it had the horses. Davidson didn't and lost, 82-75. It was here that Jay Buckley, fired up over being called a "weak link" in the lineup, proved that he was anything but. The Bird was unstoppable the rest of the way, averaging 20 points per game and almost an equal number of rebounds. What happened after the game is best forgotten. Steamed up over the loss, Lefty Driesell (a Duke alumnus, no less) said his conquerors were "yellow" if they did not play Davidson at home next year. Gentleman that he is, Coach Driesell publicly apologized for his loose words. The Davidson game must have taken some of the sharp edge off the team. Against Wake at Winston-Salem, they managed to beat themselves, 72-71.

Now it was the home stretch. First it was Maryland's turn to be demolished, 84-63, and then Wake was convincingly beaten, 98-83. Mullins collected 53 points in the two games. Luckily, Euzzy Harrison does not suffer from claustrophobia. In the close confines of Woollen Gym, he displayed a beautiful shooting eye and touch. When the Tarheels jammed the middle, Euzzy blazed away from the outside. He continued to blaze and wound up with 28 points. At the end, it was 104-69, the highest score ever run up against UNC at home.

For all their finesse and polish, these would not amount to a hill of beans, if the Devils lost during the ACC Tournament. State made it close, but succumbed 75-44, in the first round. Carolina was even at the half, 20-20, but finally gave in, 65-49. As for Wake, OF Bones just doesn't know when he's licked. The Deacons ran with us; they are still running. Duke won, 80-59, repeating as ACC Champions and claiming the right to enter NCAA competition.

In the Eastern Regionals, held in Raleigh, it was generally conceded that the winner of the first game (Duke-Villanova) would be favored over the winner of the nightcap (Connecticut-Princeton). The problem, then, was beating the 7th-ranked Wildcats. Wally Jones, Jim Washington, and Coach Jack Kraft had their doubts. Until they met the man from Lexington. Duke followers say it was the greatest exhibition since Dick Groat set the varsity scoring record of 48 points; some even say it was the greatest one-man performance ever by a player wearing the Blue and White. You had to see it to believe it. Mullins dropped in 28 in the first half, 43 for the night.

Buzz Harrison pumps from the circle.

Slick Buzzy Harrison jumps one from the side in Kansas City.

With no help in sight, Steve Vacendak drives against the Bruins of UCLA.

Try as he might, he simply could not miss. As the first-half buzzer sounded, Jeff let one fly from the backcourt. Swish. It was just one of those nights, 87-73, favor of Duke. The Huskies from Connecticut surprised Princeton and then were surprised themselves. Coach Fred Shabel, who made a lot of friends in this area, built a winner at Storrs in one year's time. But as he himself admitted, there are different brands of basketball; and you don't challenge the Duke brand. It was something ridiculous at the end, like 101-54, if you can count that high. The hit tune in the Duke dressing room was "Goin' to Kansas City."

We went. Along with past nemesis Michigan, UCLA, and Kansas State. The coaches and scribes were divided over a favorite, although a majority appeared to favor the Devils. Friday night you could see why. Buckley was great. Not good, great. As the game progressed, Buckley invented shots and made them. He hooked left, hooked right, faked this way and that, showed moves no one knew he had or even existed. The Dukes were "up" no mistake. Bird's 25 points put us in the finals against UCLA, an unknown quantity.

There can be no mistake that UCLA won or deserved to win. It's all down in black and white, in the game statistics, and in the memory of those who watched. But you can't help thinking that on another night, it might have been different. The Bruins pressed, and that upset our poise, as no one expected it would. They shot well, but you might concede that. But they outrebounded the taller Devils, and outlasted them, and that is our game. Through most of the first half, the issue was in doubt. With Duke up by 3, UCLA was overwhelming in a two-minute point-burst. The handwriting was on the wall. Final score 98-83.

Coming through in the clutch; as the pressure mounted, Buckley seemed to get better and better. Here, Bird arches his famous hook over Michigan's brawny Bill Buntin.

Although the grapplers carded another losing season, they showed marked improvement over last year, and look forward to next winter with justifiable optimism. The entire squad will return, and this year's undefeated freshman team should provide additional support. Duke finished the season 2-7, with wins over North Carolina State and Davidson. Standout performers were: Captain Dick Lam, John Holder, and Luke Sharpe, who suffered only one loss and then rebounded to win the ACC heavyweight title. Jon Clarke, Sam Walker, and Bill Hough also turned in notable performances. The Devils compiled 28 points in the Conference tournament, the greatest point-total in recent years.

The referee calls out a second pin for John Holder (137 lbs.)

In its third season, the fencing team compiled a 5-2 record. As yet, the team does not have varsity status; the majority of fencers are freshmen, and the coaches are unsalaried, although the Duke University Athletic Association does finance the equipment. Some of the fencers also double as coaches. In winning the last match against North Carolina the team fielded thirteen men, all but two of whom will be back next year.

A glistening sport

Volunteer Head Coach David Evans is assisted by Dr. Walker of the French Department, who acts as freshman coach and epee coach, and by Steed Rollins, who serves as foil coach. Fencing was offered by the Physical Education Department for the first time this year. Coach Evans looks to the future, when there will be a full-fledged varsity, along with an intramural program. This will include beginners' classes and a club for those interested in fencing.

The main concern of the Pep Board is maintaining school spirit throughout the year. Activities, planned by an executive council, are carried out by the staff and by representatives from each dorm on East and West. The Board also supervises the annual election of cheerleaders and selects the Blue Devil mascot each year.

Year-round spirit

Noise from rallies preceding home football games echoes through the main quad during the fall. Telegrams of encouragement, signed by the student body, are sent to the team on the road. With the arrival of winter and basketball, additional rallies are scheduled in support of the "fabulous five." Board members paint the trestle between campuses, sell lapel badges and ribbons, and make decorative banners and posters, urging athletes to "Wreck Tech" or "Demolish Davidson."

A cheerleader was heard to remark during the year: "It's hard to make an audience yell when it doesn't want to, but I'm often amazed at the support we do get, in spite of the celebrated Duke Apathy." Representing the four undergraduate schools and colleges, the yell squad is devoted to creating and leading student body support of athletics. Cheering at football and basketball games, pep rallies, and send-offs, are a few occasions on which school "spirit" may be demonstrated. This was the year, too, of the Dancing Cheerleaders, decked out in pert new uniforms, performing ten colorful routines, and backed by the Pep Band in straw hats and blazers.

With this sort of competition, there's a lot to be said for intramurals.

men's intramurals

The late Kenneth C. (Gerry) Gerard said: "Intramural Athletics not only develop the individual physically, but they train his mental, moral, and social nature as well. Through this form of activity he learns the meaning of sportsmanship, fair play, and sacrifice of self for the best interest of the group. The returns which come from exercise cannot help contributing to a more complete living. As a cardinal principle, we have established the fact that facilities of the Intramural Department be always open to the use of the students." Directed by Senior Manager Bob Verhey, the IM program sponsored leagues in basketball, football, volleyball, and softball. There were also tournaments in horseshoes, badminton, tennis, handball, and golf.

The Woman's Recreation Association sponsored dormitory and sorority competition in a well-rounded athletic program. There were tournaments in tennis, badminton, table tennis, archery, basketball, softball, volleyball, bowling, and two swimming meets. A publicized record of the results and standings helped stimulate interest in the program.

In a Phi Beta Kappa address at Harvard, Woodrow Wilson spoke of the community of scholars and pupils as being, more properly, a "mode of association." So too, the relationship of the individual to the University, outside of the classroom, is a mode of association. With a wealth of activities before him, there is a tendency for these to be blurred in memory, piled one on the other: colorful combos, "the game," formal dances, parties, the coming and going of vacations, open houses, intramurals, concerts both formal and informal, dates, sunbathing, coats and ties on Sundays, chariot races, coffee breaks, quad ball in its several variations, penny pitching, ducats, bridge, big weekends, sings and serenades, the late show, and so on and so on. These myriad associations may make an important contribution to "the college experience."

The Duke Panhellenic Council works to promote better relations among the sororities and between Duke and the Durham community. Two representatives from each of the twelve national sororities on campus and the sorority presidents meet weekly to coordinate Pan-hel activities. A Greek Day program during Orientation Week made use of discussion groups and displays to present freshman women with a comprehensive view of sorority life at Duke. The Council supervised Rush during the first week of classes and then turned its attention to the campaign for a new Student Activities Building. Council members participated in several fund-raising projects to help bring the needed structure closer to reality. A major goal was realized when Hanes House was included in Spring Rush; a new channel for unity between East and Hanes was thus opened.

Rush Week for Alpha Chi was filled with memories and merriment. (We never will forget our last-minute panic at the enormity of the task of transforming our class-room into an under-sea wonderland, or the yards and yards of cheesecloth that seemed to take forever to hang!) Our eighteen lively pledges were a thrilling reward for our labors, though; and the Pledge Banquet at Schraffl's the following week was a joyful affair.

A happy and full fall semester followed our party with the Lambda Chi's, the round of Homecoming activities, and plans for our semi-formal dance being highlights. And there was the fun-filled Saturday afternoon that we spent making toys for the children at the Cerebral Palsy Hospital, our spirits dampened only slightly by listening to the radio, as we lost to Georgia Tech. We remember the Sorority Sing, our musical theme of "Brigadoon" and the perky tams we wore. A gay Christmas party at Trinka's house filled us with Christmas cheer, which lasted through the holidays.

Spring brought the gala Pledge Dance at Schraffl's. Large golden lyres, one for each pledge, lined the walls. The girls, dazzling in their white gowns, were formally presented to their sisters-to-be. A short while later, they were initiated and proudly wore their new pins. March brought Peanut Pal Week, a dinner in the Union, and work with the Easter Seals Foundation. Close on the heels of these activities came the whirl of events accompanying Greek Week and Joe College. Then, suddenly, the Honors Convocation, exams, and Commencement were upon us - and another memorable year was over.

Rockin' Rush.

September swept the Omicron ADFI's into Rush. Under Russell's superb leadership, we had a ball and found our ranks swelled by eighteen of the finest young ladies. Pledge-swaps at Duke and Carolina, the Big-Little Sister Banquet, bake sales and projects kept our new Pi's busy. Our usual Saturday trips to C. P. were made in the company of our sisters from the CHANTICLEER Beauty Court, and weren't we pleased to have Annette as Feauty Queen? Wedding bells rang for Lady Buge, Lillian, and Nancy T. And we had a visit from Trish and Kelly that left us laughing. Our Halloween party was a riot, with masks, ghost stories, and goblins. Meetings, speakers, banquets, and recitals carried us up to Christmas and our traditional party at C.P. with the K.A.'s. Christmas caroling with the Beta's reminded us of the fun we had in the Sorority Sing, under Anne's talented direction. After vacation, a dive for the books and a long period of study got us through exams.

Into second semester, after helping our favorite fraternities with Rush. The pledges were presented at the pledge dance, while pins, lavaliers, and rings occupied others now. Off to Spruce Pine Lodge for retreat, making plans for next year and having fun in the meantime. Secret Buddies, Friendship Week, and Founder's Day—seeing lots of blue and white. Spring made it hard to study with warm weather calling. Greek Week, Senior Banquet, Joe College, and Beach Weekend brought us to exams. Then we headed back to Pawley's Island for sun and surf. Tanned, or burnt, we headed our separate ways, remembering a grand year together and looking forward to the next.

A district governor lends advice.

Beta Nu got off to a "huesoxious" start with the initiation of Shirley and Dianne preceding Rush. Under Sheppie's direction, the "Madras Mexicans," featuring "Jose Colegio," starred in our new South-of-the-Border party. The highlight of Rush was our formal garden party, with informally gathered ivy. Activities combined to make studies almost non-existent. It was well worth it, though, since "Happiness is honorable mention on a Homecoming poster." At a Big-Little Sister Banquet at the Festa Room, the pledges received their lavaliers. Beta Nu vocalized at a hootenanny and picnic and continued singing as "the Blue and Grey" became less civil during song practices under Amy's capable direction. Candy and messages on doors gave us energy to pack for Thanksgiving. The traditional Christmas party given by the Durham alumnae was as enjoyable as ever, with the exchange of gifts and light-hearted verse.

After Christmas, Alpha Phi went into hibernation for exams. After a "relaxing" break, a new round of activities was planned. The programs instituted first semester—the revamped scholarship drive, the active-of-the-month award, and bingo parties at the VA Hospital were all continued. "Inspiration Week," ending in the pledge dance, prepared us for a meaningful initiation and the welcome addition of new sisters. Orchids to the activities chairman for her devoted work on the Follies skit and the Greek Week booth. Momentum continued in a "fun" Spring Rush, regrettably slowed down by exams and the Senior Party. Beach Weekend rounded out the fun, and successful exams proved that work and play can be combined, as Beta Nu completed another wonderful year.

A burgundy-clad vulture sits on the trunk in the hall, eyeing the freshmen walking past. By the basin lounges a hygienic miss, brushing her teeth — for thirty minutes.

These are upperclassmen?

See the upperclassmen?

They see you!

For Rush has begun, with smiles, whispers, calloused knees, occasional shrieks, and tears. But soon, thank heavens, it's over. Dorrie Delta has eighteen pledges; sweet fresh faces; let's hope they are smart, too. It is cold and clear early in the morning by the summer house. But the ritual is brief. Delta Delta Delta and a green triangle pin.

Our district advisor is coming, starch and iron the chapter. What do you mean, Pegram stole our pedestal? The Rathskellar is warm on Halloween, as we toil and trouble over a pitcher of cider. There's something good about this party—skol and sisterhood. Before Thanksgiving is Founder's Day and our annual banquet. Margaret is such a nice alum; she bakes cakes and puts up with us, too. The chicken and pie are good, and the Chapel Hill Deltas are nice.

Christmas is a'coming, and our studies do increase, but we'll study after the Pine Party, the Power Puff Bowl, and singing at the retirement home. The band plays a gentle tune, and the pledges are presented in white dresses, all scrubbed, with shiny hair and embarrassed smiles. The sisters look good, too, but maybe they're feeling a little bit old. So the rest of the year flies by. Greek Week, parties, and exams. Down at Myrtle, we gather on a blanket, play cards, and tan, not knowing how to say goodbye.

"And in the sweetness of friendship let there be laughter, and the sharing of pleasures." Gibran

So it is with Delta G. from the orderly chaos of Rush Retreat to the poignant recap of the year at the Senior Banquet. We had more than our share of pinnings, engagements, and wedding bells. Jann, Connie, and DiAnna were still with us after summer weddings. Our nineteen pledges, plus the girls from Hanes in the spring brought the excitement of expanding friendship. In the best tradition of the "Anchor Clan," we linked friendship, fun, and hard work, and came up with Phi Beta's, beauties, and campus leaders.

The first week back in these hallowed halls found Thetas knee-deep in unpacked belongings, promises of hour quizzes to come, and Rush. When the rush was over and the dust had settled, Thetas welcomed their new pledges at the annual Pizza Party, where big and little sisters were mutually adopted. October brought Homecoming and the campaign, adopted by our sanitation committee, to "Clean-up Clemson." Thursdays in November found secret buddies stealthily slithering between dorms on their appointed rounds to deliver gifts and general cheer. Nor to be forgotten were the monthly Kite Nights, sponsored by one of the representative classes, especially the October Christmas party, given by the seniors, that finally revealed Alice to be the tree! The heavy burden of responsibility for creating lilting melody in a group of dedicated monotones fell on Joann's frail shoulders, and a final mighty effort brought us second place in the Sorority Sing.

After managing to weather exams, Thetas launched a new semester with Kite Day. Descending upon an unsuspecting West Campus, the pledges took advantage of brisk March winds to lift their creative efforts above James B. Duke's venerable head. That month also hosted the solemn moment of initiation, when pledge pins gave way to pearled kites and a new sense of responsibility and belonging. The Golden Triad spotlighted fun, frolic, and the presentation of our new sisters to society. Climaxing the newest Chapter in Theta annals was the Senior Banquet, when we said good-bye to those who would disappear in the golden graduation sunset. Thetas, you had a good Year!

Hen party.

Back from vacation and raring to go, Kappa Deltas plunged headlong into a Rush retreat and discussions of our Farm Party, Buddha Party, and Garden of Dreams. With Minnie steering us through Rush, plans worked out fantastically, and nineteen new pledges were our rewards. Although we were scarcely through polishing our trophy from last year's Follies, Sugar helped us cop first place in the Homecoming Displays. October brought our annual fun dinner at the Angus Barn—steak and chicken to the gills. Then came the get-together with the Kappa Deltas from UNC at the Holiday Inn. Never ones to be out-eaten, we dived into plans for a supper at Annamaria's, so that the pledges could present their skit. With Christmas, came our party with the AX's at the VA Hospital and a private party just for ourselves. Sandy showed slides of Germany, so that we could have something to dream about over the holidays. Devoting most of our energies to Edgemont, we chaperoned teenage dances and sponsored a senior citizens' club. We were proud of our $\Phi K \Delta$'s—Nancy Jo, Gail, and Sally.

Second semester, we laughed with the pledges at the pledge banquet, when sisters exchanged poems and gag gifts. Now, we couldn't wait to get our pledge crew initiated, so after White Rose Week and the pledge dance, we said "Hi!" to new sisters. After Greek Week, we turned again to banqueting, this time for scholarship. Those with a 3.0 had steak, but most of us relished luscious, juicy, taste-tempting beans. After we sadly said good-bye to seniors at their special party, we finished off a glorious year at the beach.

Relax, kids, it will all be over soon.

Phi Mu Circus Party.

Gamma Epsilon has a new look, a new outlook, and a new lease on life. The year began with an enthusiastic group returning for the rush workshop, and before we could say "Hello!", Rush was upon us. We welcomed our District President and our National President, who spent Rush Week with us, working as hard as we did. Highlighting the week was Bobbie's unforgettable Circus Party, complete with wild animals, sno-cones, and Phi Mu clowns. When rush was over, the alums honored the new pledges with a delightful dinner at Ruth's.

This was a big year for Phi Mu. Janet served Pan-hel as secretary, and Linda and Deanie were elected to Phi Beta Kappa, as the Pan-hel scholarship trophy came our way for the fourth straight semester. Bobbie taught first grade, and Susan finally met her knight in shining armor. Pam journeyed to Atlanta to witness the November massacre, while Martha became president for seven weeks as Deanie practice-taught in Charlotte.

So much to remember . . . dinners in the Union, the Big-Little Sister Banquet, the Halloween party at Sue's, the music from "Hans Christian Andersen" in the Sing, and the pledging of Harriet. And will we ever forget the Phi Mu-tual? Or how proud the pledges were when they presented us with their project? Or Susan's "book?"

The pledges contributed immensely to the high spirits and fun. How did we ever get along before the inimitable Margie? And Jean 'n' Margaret, the "Gruesome Twosome?" Spring brought Initiation, and we happily welcomed our new sisters into our bond. All too soon came the senior farewell picnic, and Phi Mu's greatest year drew to a close.

pi beta phi

Pi Phi's had just a week of reunion before plunging into Rush with characteristic enthusiasm. Soon, twenty superlative pledges were added to our number—a real pirate treasure!!! They were welcomed into Pi Phi with the annual "cookie shine" and the pledge banquet at Hope Valley. The seasons passed so quickly for us . . . fall brought with it Homecoming and lovely Queen Ginny, a hilarious Big-Little Sister Banquet at the Rat, a "spook party," and hasty retreat to Spruce Pine Lodge. With rising spirits and scholarship (4th place this year!), we welcomed several fascinating faculty speakers and discussed "intellect" at a tea and panel with the Tri-Delts.

The holiday season was highlighted by the Pledge's Christmas party and playing Santa with the Beta's at a party for the Edgemont children. Encouraged by last year's "most athletic" trophy, we quickly replaced the annual Pi Phi-Phi Delt "Hoe Down" with an arousing volleyball tourney with the Sigma Chi's—adding them to our tally of conquests.

Exams over, those eager pledges were finally initiated and presented at an impressive Golden Triad. Then more serious doin's. . . . We enthusiastically joined our sisters at Carolina in celebrating Founder's Day and kept our traditional rendezvous with the Kappa's on Monmouth Duo Day. The rest of spring passed by in rapid flashes. . . . Greek Week, Joe College, the '64 National Convention. Then—all too soon—it was time for a nostalgic senior banquet, Myrtle Beach . . . and very regrettable good-byes.

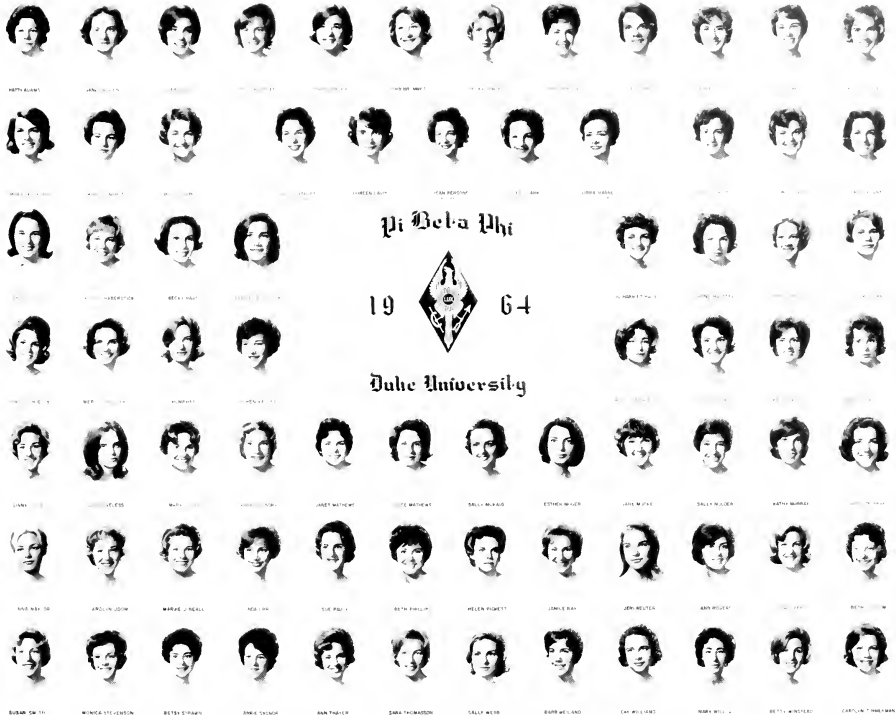

They're not weeds, they're flowers.

Sigma Kappa Tea.

Rush. Rush. Rush. These were the words which heralded the Alpha Phi's as they returned for another year of work and fun together. Beginning with a retreat at the Forest Hills Club House and ending with the pledging of seven wonderful girls, rush was everything and much more than had ever been anticipated. We were especially glad to have two of our national traveling secretaries with us during the festivities. The pledges were honored twice—once the night of bidding for pizza at the Festa Room and again at a formal banquet in the Union.

Right after rush, we put everyone to work—first on our Homecoming poster and then on the Thanksgiving basket for an Edgemont family. We also visited our "grandmothers" at the King's Daughters Home. During these busy days, we also found time to give a shower for one of our sisters, who had recently been married. At a November tea in East Duke, we celebrated the founding of Sigma Kappa 89 years ago. We were pleasantly surprised on this occasion by a visit from last year's president.

December brought the Christmas pledge formal with Gamma Phi at North Carolina State, a mucho fun Christmas party, and ole Saint Nick. With the traumas of exams over, we emerged into the new semester with renewed enthusiasm. With spring came initiation and the traditional banquet, our fun-type work on the Greek Week Carnival, the Follies, and Joe College. Valentine's and Saint Patrick's Day parties also added to the semester's enjoyment. As the school year drew to a close and exams stared us in the face, we said farewell to our seniors. Then to the beach and "goodbye" until next September.

September saw the return of the clan, a little regretful about the graduated Zetas. However, we managed to get organized enough to get out to Camp New Hope for a Rush retreat—a strategy session held between bridge games, visits from grads, and discussions of the summer's developments. After a successful Rush and the pledging of our seventeen new sisters, a busy semester followed each week ended uproariously with the traditional Happy Hours at the UG.

The Sorority Sing heard our melodious voices (improved by many practices) rendering Jerome Kern with professional skill. In athletics, the Zetas excelled, trouncing the Tri-Delts in touch football and defeating the ADPi's in volleyball. Christmas came, highlighted by the Christmas party for the children at the CP Hospital. After Christmas, the Zetas prepared diligently for exams and came through them in stellar fashion.

Zeta Week finally arrived—bringing with it secret buddies, the anxiously anticipated pledge dance, and initiation. The next event on the Zeta calendar was Greek Week. Zetas worked long and hard on their Follies entry and managed to look like the original Ziegfeld troupe, Saturday night was strictly for relaxing, which all Zetas did with gusto. We had great fun preparing for and participating in Joe College. The inevitable exams rolled around again and, once more successfully passed, our best year so far was climaxed by the traditional trip to the beach.

The Duke Interfraternity Council is concerned with furthering fraternity relations, unifying fraternity action on common problems, serving as an organ of cooperation between the University and the individual brotherhoods, and serving as a forum for interfraternity problems. Two governing bodies make up the council: the eighteen fraternity presidents sit on the Council of Presidents, the legislative branch; IFC judicial and executive affairs are referred to the Executive Board. Appointed committees Investigating, Scholarship, Rush, Publicity and Public Relations, Social, Pledging, Publication, and Help Week assist the Executive Board in its work. This year, necessary revisions were made concerning relations with freshmen, providing for a more satisfactory program.

Fall found the suntanned Taus ready and eager for another banner year. Football season was a roaring success with hamburger fries and all-day rites at Spruce Pine Lodge. President Bob (Groundhog) Johnson, Hollow Folk, Wink, Hairy, Vag, Grundy, and Lucky Touchdown brought new glory to Taus on the gridiron. Meanwhile, Tau intramural footballers, led by Leon (Winston flash) Rice and Jon (Big Daddy) Reynolds, rocketed to the undergraduate championship, only to be upset by the Law School. Fall Sigma Betas were again a highlight, as only a minimum of brothers suffered injuries. Homecoming found the Durham merchants with a keen aesthetic sensibility; they awarded top honors to Kadink's water-wheel. The Taus and Kappas celebrated Christmas with a party for the Edgemont children.

Topping the holiday festivities was the traditional Christmas party this year a Roman orgy featuring Nero Luciano.

Second semester saw the Taus bring home the cream of the freshman crop. Under the able leadership of "R," Stump, Packy, Bugs, Guppy, and Pumpkin, aspirants for initiation into Sigma Beta were instructed in the high standards expected of all participants. Parties were enhanced by the "new sound" of Cess Poel and the Septics, ably assisted by Little Frankie and the Four Woom-pals. Sweetheart Ball saw the end of Jane Mucke's reign and the crowning of the new Tau Sweetheart. Kadink again achieved Rose Owl excellence, as our Joe College float was applauded by cheering throngs. Festivities ended at the Chapel Hill Legion Hut with the incomparable Untouchables. Climaxing the greatest year yet was the ATO return to the beach, a most stimulating experience.

Bang, you're dead . . .

Under the sound, if not wholly exemplary leadership of Brother "Melts," who early in the year informed us of a seeming excess of "breath" within the chapter, Beta Theta Pi embarked upon some of its finest hours. Under the jaundiced eye of "Worv," the Betas staged an unexcelled Homecoming exhibition, highlighted by the antics of the "perennial pledge" and "Nail," who allowed himself to be talked out of flicking-out for the fourteenth consecutive night, so that he might help "Kai-Collins" herd cattle. All is not meaningless folly. The Christmas season brought this home, as Betas rediscovered the joy of giving. At our party with the Pi Phi's at Edgemont, the children showed an uncanny ability to discover just who the "Goat" was. Heartwarming fraternity spirit was further demonstrated at the annual Gross Gift party. The atmosphere here was somewhat destroyed by the dispute between Williams, Vincent, and Pettit, each shouting that the party should be held in his room, in view of his monumental accomplishments.

The brothers of Gamma Rho finally settled down to academics, inspired by "R.P." and "Jellyrolls" edifying, illustrated speech on fifteen new, exciting, and feasible methods for success. "John Charles," "Nail," and "PGH," who wears Dope Shop ties, rounded up the best of the frosh, in wheat-jeans and turtle-necks, unaware that they had passed chapter over the limp but contented bodies of "Foggy," "Sceever," and the "Hopper." The air gets warm, and as "Guinea's" pipe-dream explodes and the boys embark on Beach Weekend, the sounds of laughing girls, sports cars, and "Key-Mons" tells that Betas live on, reveling in the throes of "Kai."

Betas rock the boat.

And what would you like for Christmas, little girl?

One more year has passed, with the Delta Sigs "hummin' in there," as usual. Homecoming found us "Punting the Pussycat," with the able assistance of our exceptional engineers? Needless to say, Delta Sigs came up in academic status from last year. How could we help doing otherwise? The tube crew was really up this past year, never missing an episode of "The Fugitive." (We finally saw the one-armed man!)

Rush this past year was a tremendous success. The painting of the chapter room and the addition of new furniture really helped. (Come through one time, weasel!) Rush also witnessed the saga of the flying ham and the installation of a new, foolproof, trash-can burglar-alarm system.

The coming of Joe College gave birth to memories of Yogi Bear, Jellystone, Picnic Box lunches, and trophies. All in all, things have progressed beautifully and smoothly in the Delta Sig section this past year. But then, with guys like "The Shadow," "Flower," "Stump," "Worm," et. al., how could life be anything else than an esoteric bowl of cherries?

Delt cabin party.

A completely refurbished chapter room, a great social calendar, and an inspired academic attitude set the stage for the Deltas of '63-'64. The "Hinge," though folding in many ways, did not collapse as our Social General. The party with the Tri-Deltas started the social year off on a high note, and we continued the pace with cabin parties and the Christmas dinner-dance. Charlie's became the Deltas' "Shelter away from the Shelter" and a favorite with the Delt girls. Under the direction of an enthusiastic and well-organized Rush Committee, the Deltas shook up twenty-seven top freshmen. This successful Rush was an indication of our fall semester spirit, which also helped us to produce a miraculous fraternity average of 2.51, with twenty brothers over 3.0.

Notable events of the year were the flood, Whale's Christmas present, Grape's horseback ride, Hicky's letter to the editor, our first case of pinning at first sight, Grape's showers, the near shotgunning of P-2, formal meetings, and Witz's comment, "What do you mean, she's not on the plane?" Second semester was highlighted by our annual "Queen Dance" and the old reliable "Beach Week." Under a revised pledge program, twelve men became brothers of Delta Tau Delta. We owe much of our success this past year to the fine leadership of President John Williamson and the capable assistance of John Walden and Marc Harris. Their inspired administration was happily combined with the never-flagging "Delt spirit"—to make Delta Tau Delta truly a Fraternity of Brotherhood.

Let's twist again, like we did last summer . . .

It seemed as if someone was out to get the KA's. Hog-Body was run off the road in Willy John's car; the next night, Karate suffered a similar fate. Hot Dog was slashed to pieces by a Turkish sword, while V.I. quivered after suffering a 12-gauge shotgun blast. Snake, Cloud, and Driessen began the year with their usual amorous advances but soon discovered a preference for booze. Aristotle helped keep Frog, Velie, and D.H.'s son in awe, while providing food for thought. B-b-bobby was about to say "I d-d-do," while Dean-O escaped the terrible vows with mutterings about the Air Force. Baby David was never in the dorm, preferring Pegrarn. KA's continued their perennial search for diversion from study. There was bridge in the chapter room, pinocle in 210, and "crazy eights" in any available space. With exams, the boys put away their cards and played chess.

Shocking in his horn-rimmed glasses, Chip was a jovial Santa at the KA-ADPi Christmas party. Sissy was one of the cutest "fairies" ever seen, and Doug played the part of the man in bed to perfection. Rush was another superhuman effort, thanks to Fred, Chuck, and the infinitely resourceful Conrad. The parties with Converse girls and John Law's raiding five were immensely enjoyed. Poopsie really showed his intuitive charm and poise, while Peni exhibited his basic motivation for petty theft. Half-Mind and Davie D. kept everyone disheveled with their inane altercations. "European" and "nigger" Bugg kept to themselves, a veritable blessing. The seniors have more-or-less been ensnared by the opposite sex, except Driess, Moto, and ever-popular, affable Vee. They too will soon fall, no doubt.

Kappa Sigs staggered back to a newly unrenovated section for another year of losing, horror shows, and N.P.F.W. Led by Farley, Rocky, Wilkie, and Deacon, everyone hit the books and the bottles, while Booloo set up a fitting social program to celebrate the end of social pro. Zan climaxed a season of catching passes by being elected King of the Animal Quad Ball, and then fading back to pass. The Redecoration Committee attacked the chapter room, and everyone was delighted to find the only two-tone blue and burgundy chapter room on campus. As Christmas approached, Bulldog took the lead as most hirable, but Ginkgraves and Hand J. also caught their share. The Christmas Party resulted in only four horror shows, two broken chairs, and one total L.O.P.

When exams hit, the scholarly sophomores led the way and the fraternity average climbed to new heights, while Scott the Shot hung on for his sixth consecutive last semester. Inspired by Fairvines, we turned on the charm for Rush and came out with another group of studly shakeups. Beauvines whipped the pledges into shape, while everyone enjoyed the spring social schedule and occasional trips to the infamous Dildo House. Basketball gave Kappa Sigs a chance to show what athletic supporters they are, and cabin parties and open houses gave Skip and John a chance to see who could get pinned and unpinned the fastest. With spring came weekly beach week-ends and snaps, and the inevitable Joe College acts. Moon Memorial Games were the thing to do, and some outstanding performances in the Hundred Yard Hash and the Lager Mile Relay produced the usual grins.

September saw Duke's "Foo's" flock back to the protective wing of President "Bird" Montgomery. They started the ball rolling with a Saturday afternoon of football, "prince," and the like with the ANO's. The fall semester social calendar was marked by one wild party after another, highlighted by Homecoming, with music by the "Invisible Men." Brother LaVarre's brilliance as social chairman was matched only by his ability to lose soap and toothpaste. "Grub" Bond came through by winning the Cake Race and then proving he wasn't out for glory by winning the Ugly Man Contest. In December, Lambda Chi's and KD's played Santa Claus for 25 children. This proved rewarding for all, especially for Kausch, despite his little "accident."

John Cawley, whose platform is still being deciphered, headed the list of new officers. Action, however, is what counts in leadership; plenty of action took place around the Foo section during spring semester, including a highly successful Rush. Ski Weekend at Hot Springs highlighted the winter social schedule; the brothers stayed at the winter home of Barfield Butts. The inventive genius of "Uli" and "Oilcan" produced another first for ANA's in a custom-built skateboard, to warm up for Myrtle. Lambda Chi's snowed hell out of their dates at the annual White Rose formal. By some stroke of good fortune, ANA has been allowed to return to the scene of last May's demolition derby. We promised to replace all broken windows and clean all eggs from the walls. The prince team will enter the Myrtle Invitational without Captain "D.D." Condit. It remains to be seen how well this team will fare. Let's do it again!

Cheers!

Setting forth in September, a band of Greeks bearing azure colors marched boldly into the new year. Archon Brown led his noble band into new territory over favorable terrain, which enabled his lively Greeks to turn their attentions to many extracurricular endeavors. Many of his warriors proved their Spartan abilities on the gridiron. All-American Wilkinson, flanked by Curtis and Eracy, anchored the team, and, after an enemy blow felled the noble Uible, a brash Greek took over command. A Greek wearing tweed frequented the battlefield, and the mysterious Holloway unlimbered his secret weapon weapon on occasion. Dionysus Espy controlled the affairs of state and ran his principality on the foundation of three C's. A Southern Greek (Grit) planned activities for leisure time, and the social activities of this band were envied by all, reaching legendary proportions.

At the change of seasons, a wise Greek called Barker took up the argente standard and led his band through fierce competition to the most successful Rush ever, garnering many sturdy young neophytes. The strength of the new members, coupled with the return of many lost comrades, who earlier had fallen to the lunar enchantment of Diana, greatly bolstered the ranks of the Phi's noble band. Thus strengthened, and encouraged by a narrow victory in academic combat the band of Greeks known as the Phis plunged into the adventure of the new semester, featured encampments on sunny Myrtle shores and nights in Southern tropic climes and made, for all who saw them passing by, their legend of greatness a reality.

The Brothers of Phi Psi returned with the hope that the year would bring forth a fresh social life for all of us. But instead, we were greeted by the perennial problem of no grass in front of the section, so that all thoughts were turned to a renovation of the area. In January, Mac and Bo finally came upon the solution, and we became the only fraternity on campus with a private ice rink. With the advent of February and the mountain snows, many brothers left the rock pile to head for the slopes. As February pressed on, old rivalries were renewed and new ones were found. Bill and Van led us through a very successful social program for the year, with the Rites of Spring party and Peach Weekend as the highlights. With the addition of new pledges, the fraternity took on a new spirit, as many brothers and pledges began to migrate to points North for social fulfillment.

Melvin and Tony the Tiger became honorary members, as the Undertakers continued to be a source of much abuse from the Brothers. Chell continued the old spirit by wrecking his XK-E. The Owl kept up his vigil in G-A at the tube with his favorite gapers. The hair-hat became popular even before the Beatles and died out with them. The approach of exams saw the annual migration to the beach on more weekends than one, and finally the year was at an end, with all extremely anxious to be back next year—in the “renovated dorms with drains in each floor.”

Anne Rogers, Phi Kappa Sigma Sweetheart

With the new year, the halls of the Skull House reverberated once again with Phi Kap voices. Fog's "rooster" jokes, Jeff's Hollins fiasco, and Rita created a somewhat mystic season. Quisti's "John Brown" in the third floor head; Zan's belt-buckle and Razor's sailboat at Bugg's; the "Beatles"; Bobby Dick, a brother; Battle's amazing command of elocution; Bird's philosophical prognostics; Santa Slum's off-and-on pin; Droopy and Goo-Goo; Trudge's ? love-affair; and Little Stevie Wonder's whirlwind dating combined to make life most enjoyable. Winter found us at Bugg's Island: "Row, Row, Row Your Boat" was the theme, and Slum's Aqua Show, T's midnight stroll, and Sandy will not be soon forgotten. Homecoming "Tiger Stew" and the Christmas Party added to the Holiday Season.

Spring semester found thoughts of love, Buzz and UMOC worried by baldness, and R.D.'s infamous return. Black and Gold's trips to the ski slopes took their toll of brothers. Notable performances included Bill Hill's defeat of Oliver Cool as top-tuber; Pistji's and Pinky's academic degrees in Bridge and Cribbage; Thomas' certificate in barbering; Herbie's pledging; Jamieson's defeat of Uncle Sam; K.D.'s and Preston's Mr. Gross contest; Spunky's cheerleading; Huneycutt's interception on the last play of the game; Razor's victory over Flip in pre-game warm-ups; Fireball's everpresent "Yeah"; and Monk's pinning to everyone's Sweetheart. Under the leadership of Sphinx and Goody, Phi Kaps enjoyed a year of pleasure interrupted only by laughter. Memories remain as the last page in another chapter of the Skull Book is completed.

A bevy of beauties at Bugg's.

You can't sit down.

This was the Year of the Wall, as the Pi Kapps erected a barrier dividing the chapter room into (a) a suave den and (b) into a giant, unfurnished barn. With Archons Goose Belvin and Super-Luther Atwater in command, the fraternity soared to unheard-of heights. Trashmouth passed Accounting. Osman grossed out chaperones. Blossom got a guitar, and T-Bear got a five-foot boa constrictor. Even the Era of the Four-door Sedan passed: Rhesus Monkey, Graybeal, Cripes, and Zeke all appeared on campus with rapid, new, "boss" machines. And the Bird only got pinned once.

Socially, we attempted suaveness. Everybody quit cigarettes to take up smoking pipes. With the help of the obliging KD's, we polished off four kegs in one afternoon. During spring vacation, we held chapter meetings in Nassau, where we dreamed up the idea of inviting Maurice Williams and the Zodiacs to the Pledge Formal. Somehow, in the midst of all of this, five of our noble order were tapped for membership in Phi Beta Kappa. And throughout the year, our smiling Rose, Betsy Reeves, managed to put up with us—how, we'll never know. But it was a great year.

The "E's" are still here with their usual assemblage of "tubers" and social guffaws. An isolated group of self-proclaimed lovers is a new (and fictitious) addition to the spirited screamers and gapers of yesteryear. A semester of domestic academics with less dating has skyrocketed our average from 2.4 to astronomical heights. The pledge class was a welcome addition, for their average shows them to be much smarter than we are (a big concern to upperclassmen who have managed to fool preceding classes). Our spring schedule was composed of many organized functions, which led us away from the gothic splendor of our fair Alma Mater.

Last fall's innovations included free babysitting for professors and a new Homecoming display, although two sentimental brothers did provide the perennial wrecked-car display in a peep show. For the first time in years we had a really formal party. Anticipating fun-filled hours, we invited a veritable host of Duke's crop of play boy-type professors and administrators. We enjoyed all five who came, indicating tremendous interest and helping the cause of student-faculty relations. Noticeable absences were a repeated hird floor dive by "Twitch" and frequent isolated thunder showers. Voted most respectful and quiet by the fine corps of Campus Security officers, we emerged in the spring again as the reserved gentlemen our mothers have raised us to be. So, we dedicate this space to our mothers.

The year started off with a bang as Consul Chuck Walker was elected Captain of the football team, which included eleven other Sigs, notably Hog-Bod, Baby Wes, Rodney, Johnny, Gite, and the Hamlet Flash. Many Y-Men, Epes in MSGA, Moe on the Student Union Board, Worthington on the Chronicle, Symposium, and Model U.N., and many committee memberships kept us busy "down campus," while our grades soared to impressive heights. Studies didn't keep us from having some fun, though. A strong group of loyal seniors, led by Dirty Ed (the last of a legendary breed) kept the Tube warm and left it only for food, a flick, or a trip to the Owl. The social calendar was one of the best ever. The first Animal Quad Bal in several years also proved to be the last! Stinky built us a Homecoming display, but the party was a lot of fun. And despite the ever-present "gaping five," everyone enjoyed himself.

We serenaded East and Hanes as a prelude to Sweetheart Weekend. Hubs' friend, Joann Downing, was crowned our new Sweetheart by the "new Chris Miller," who, with a small amount of supervision, organized the entire weekend at the Plantation Inn. Kung-Fu never really caught on (despite the 40 select members), Chuck graduated, Uno missed, and second semester started. Jim Ladd was elected Consul, and Melch led us through a most successful Rush. "The breeze" Hamilton returned to strengthen Sig intramurals, and we were well on our way to an eighth consecutive High Point Trophy. Studying gave way to Spring Recess and assorted jaunts. Greek Week, Joe College, and the Hawaiian Party followed—then, the grand finale, Each Weekend, a great conclusion to a great year.

What'd I say?

The year of the off-campus brothers was highlighted by Porter's graduation, the Kraft Hoax, a high average and another intramural football trophy. Mother guided his flock through the year with the Sigma Nu Girl at his side, but JB took over during Rush. The pledges couldn't play football but pulled a sneak play with the furniture. On a more personal front, HDN further asserted his reputation as Grossest Man on the Eastern Seaboard. Nichols ended a three-year hibernation with a move to the stellar third floor, Fog lived with his "magination," and Jolly John, after a successful reign as KK, moved on to harass the pledge class with Pig Pen. The third floor gents had trouble with cars—Crash Douglass pulled a Sterling turn, G. T. snubbed his nose, R-squared scored with the Pumas on Myrtle Drive, and Simpson's TR started once.

From the off-campus side came a baby Woose. Truesdell came to two consecutive meetings (the second was Father Bob's after-dinner talk to the Pi Plus and Sigma Nus on sex), Ole squeaked through with only one accident, and Skipper (Bunny Jr.) joined the C.I.A. The Zerot returned, while Pear and Bergen strummed for free beer at the U.G. And while everyone was watching Annabelle and the Sceptres, Blick found a new girl(?) friend. Chief Worm Bredenberg stirred the hearts of all during Rush with his meaningful oratory. During the spring the Flatt and Scruggs fan club enjoyed Greek Week; after the brothers ran the torch from the Capitol in Raleigh, Adams was put out to sea in a dinghy after a mutiny on the Nassau trip, and Beach Week ran for a month—all to round out a top flight year in our enviable quad.

This was another outstanding year for Tau Epsilon Phi. We partied at Carolina, went into debt, built a gigantic Buddha for Homecoming, went into debt, redecorated the chapter room, and went into debt. E. Z. arrived early and confiscated half the chapter room for his boudoir. Lums, Trots, and Bezdic started their own fraternity. Chechel had the whole campus doing the "Schumes," while Knarf gave up Polaroids for beer. East wept as Kit-chakoff became ineligible but was cheered by the return of Phil Fraternity to the ranks. Dave, PLG, and Knarf broke all existing records by demolishing $2,300 worth of automobiles. Wheeze gave up studying for dancing, crashing, and horseshoe pitching, while continuing to store the fraternity "medicine" in his refrigerator. El Gayo continued to dabble in self-proclaimed philosophic wisdom and Ed out-grossed the Hot Nuts. Athletically, the Flaming Five never quite made it onto the court, but Newie Hymarks was the sentimental wrestling champ.

TEP pledges again showed who was tops with the highest pledge average and q.p. gain, while the entire brotherhood placed high in the academic standings. A week of hard work at Lincoln Hospital captured the Help Week trophy, while continued effort earned us a spread in the Durham Morning Herald. Who could forget little Johnny at the Christmas Party? Crash ran a successful Rush, while Schumes headed an outstanding pledge program, resulting in new TEPs and a new bench. Ski Weekend, Greek Week, Joe College, and Beach Weekend brought the year to a resounding close, so ending the reign of Czar Zide.

Look, our maid's in Playboy!

Congratulations, pledge!

Returning to Methodist Flats, the Θ Xen set the ball rolling with another Bird production, our "Fiesta del Toros" party, and followed up this success by capturing the Clemson "Tiger" and chaining him in the quad in time for Homecoming. To alleviate "Study's" scholastic fears, much ink was used last semester. "How's yer shirt, Peebs?" "Who's Who" Zot led us through both semesters, trouncing two of the largest and most sensational armies of pledgii on campus. Brucebaby returned from a year's coal-shovelling just in time for another climactic spring, highlighted by our not-so-hidden Desires party. "Oink" aced Car Wrecking 101 and managed to keep University Motors in business for yet another year. Ralnu was kept busy bestowing his baptism rituals, as the Modulus of Vegetation of pinnings rose to new heights.

And it was a big year for extra-curriculars, with one marriage and three engagements. The brothers walked all over the pledges at our pledge-brother ball game, but no one quite remembered the score. Boss Limey hit East with a final four-wheel drift, before answering the President's greetings for two years, unless he can get married fast. The achievement of the year came with the announcement of our long-awaited move to a larger section on the main quad. To balance the intellectual atmosphere, the Iron Chi's then went on to further heights at Greek Weekend and Joe College, squeezing in a fabulous Dream Girl formal and a serenade a la Martin, winding up the year with a pre-exam blast at Myrtle Beach.

Theta Chis prepare for the "Dream Girl" formal.

Just relaxing.

The ZBT watchword this year was FTH. It was, unfortunately, a year like all years. Monk and Checks led us to the top academically, and Panda was All-ACC in football. Abe and Louie look like good bets for Olympic weightlifting, and Hi Fred was President of the Order of Hypocrisy. Hatcherman Fat Jack had an excellent year as Judi Board head and is campaigning for re-election. Rudox led us to a fine basketball season, and Spook's slow, Southern drawl was perfect as the Voice of Northern High. Homecoming was a success, due to the fine band of Ace and the Christian Brothers. Wam starred in intramural basketball, and Dizzy became Billy Budd's little boy. Thanks to J. Quasimodo and L. Tank, ZBT had a fantastic Rush; nineteen swell guys came our way, and P. Gold can't be far behind. Fat Bookworm got thinner and Flesh got fleshier. The Old Man discovered that he was not quite too old.

Leon said "The whole hall's gonna pay" they did, with mono-measles. P. Fog was best pledge and S. Rocco was brother with the most interest. Crude demonstrated that he wasn't Crude, only vulgar and common. Dizzy made a fortune on Cassius, while Zig proved we could afford senior champagne. Enjoying the law boards, many decided to take them twice. Blitz was Mr. Bullock, and Pidge informed us that he's been setting us up. Klesmer led Hillel, and Don won at hearts—once. P. Coast assured us "if it is to be, it is up to me" was more than a slogan—a way of life; C, F, and S was thus shortened to C.S. Learning that ZBT and gentleman were synonyms, Ney epitomized the year—"Same play, Act IV."

The brothers gather in the chapter room.

in retrospect

I could perhaps like others have astounded thee with strange improbable Tales; but I rather chose to relate plain Matter of Fact in the simplest Manner and Style; because my principal Design was to inform, and not to amuse thee.

— LEMUEL GULLIVER

Apropos of the Duke undergraduate student body, which is really what this entire book is about, one is reminded of an interesting remark, which will soon, it is believed, have attained the distinction of a classic. The comment was made by an alumnus (anonymous, of course) of late vintage. Our graduate conspired with a Newsweek reporter in the September 9, 1963 issue of that magazine. The dissatisfied alum and the journalist had this to say about us.

"As it happens, the students at Duke have constituted one of the school's biggest handicaps in its drive for academic recognition. The administration has always gone in big for the 'well-rounded' student," says a recent alumnus, "the extracurricular people. I think you might class them 'achievers,' but they didn't learn a damn thing. The faculty is excellent, but it's often been like casting pearls before swine. There wasn't an intellectual on the campus!" (italics supplied ed.) Now wait just a cotton-pickin' minute. Whatever else people may say in the way of criticism, "handicapped swine," you must admit, is just a little hard to take. At any rate the battle lines were rather clearly drawn and a sense of excitement and anticipation ligered in the air before the year actually got under way, which it promptly proceeded to do.

As a capricious fate would have it, the Class of 1967 invaded Durham on Friday the thirteenth. It made little difference, though, since few admit to a firm belief in superstition, and most of the newly-arrived were too involved in the frenzy of Orientation to really care. On hand to greet them were Y-FAC's, Band-Aides, Pee solicitors, CHANTICLEER photographers, ROTC personnel, faculty members waving registration forms, Durham merchants with age-old, inflationary "student specials." All of these professionals were bright-eyed and bushy-tailed, in striking contrast to the bleary-eyed frosh. 1,055 strong, from 44 states and six foreign countries, the novices struggled manfully through the ordered chaos of Orientation. On schedule, the Admissions Office released the expected, though no less obnoxious figures. The outline of the new class presented an impressive statistical profile. With a little juggling here and there, in fact, you could have every freshman a valedictorian, football captain, or both! The largest class in school was also the brightest in Duke history, which came as news to no one. The average SAT scores were 625 (verbal) and 652 (mathematics). Thirty-one had been executives in secondary school student government, 51 were presidents of their class, 42 were editors of annuals, 28 had been newspaper editors, and so on. 34% of the neophytes were benefiting from financial aid, courtesy of the University, to the tune of some $300,000. With the batteries of tests behind them—placement tests, the traditions questionnaire, and the cute quiz, labeled "personality inventory," with the delicious questions: "Are you plagued by incestuous desires?" and "Is your sex life satisfactory?" (silly), the bewildered or frustrated frosh settled down to more serious business, whatever that might be.

Those who keep track of trivia point out that September is the month of, by, and for freshmen, much as June is designed for seniors and brides. The month and the campus are the private preserve of freshmen, granted, but only briefly. Until such time as the hordes of upperclassmen — tanned, healthy, and incredibly suave, return and reassert their legitimate claims. The well-dressed upperclassmen—in dark-dark-but-never-black loafers, ratty pants, and button-downs — and even the not-so-natty, found a host of changes awaiting their approval. Dr. Douglas M. Knight now occupied the executive suite in Allen Building. Dean Ball was in charge of East Campus, and Dr. Meriam directed the College of Engineering. There was “free” bus service, so long as those with cars donated thirty bills; this was a parking fee, for the privilege of operating and parking (if you could find a space) a car on campus. Sufficient hell having been raised about this, the assessment remained in force when the screaming subsided.

The traditional flag-raising ceremonies on September 18 officially opened the academic year. Despite rumors to the contrary, the rules governing “voluntary” class attendance were still in effect. Alas, it was true that you flunked—no questions asked, please—if you failed to attend class religiously, but you did not have to go. The Dope Shop, neon, glass, and formica hub of the campus, abandoned the time-honored practice of serving “mixed” drinks: no more five-cent Pepsi, no more Cherry Coke, no more fresh Whammy. And gone, too, was the grilled cheese sandwich. Good grief! Then there were new University-issue id cards, with hilarious snapshots of your favorite person, bearing a resemblance to Cro-Magnon man. Gone, then, too, were the student books of old. Textbooks were bought, borrowed, put on the shelf, and the long grind rammied into high gear.

But not right away. There was, for example, the annual rite of passage known as Women’s Rush. 311 females undertook the ordeal of twenty-four smiles, sore knees, and hoarse throats. With days and nights of tears and laughter behind them, 175 pledges were welcomed into the warm embrace of sisterhood. But a pledge pin is only the outward sign of inner grace. More important were the sense of security, the opportunity for new friendships, the feeling of "belonging."

There were other diversions. The University power plant failed, and first East, then West went without light. And you can't study in the dark, whatever else you may do. The delicate question of race relations and altering the existing order is certainly not new. It took on a new sense of immediacy, however, when a small, but vocal cadre of activists—CORE—began to flex its muscles in and around the University. The face on the other side of the coin was that of Governor George Wallace, he of the famous schoolhouse door confrontation with Federal officials. The good Governor expounded the views of those, some of those, whom he represents: this, before a packed (and integrated) Page audience.

"A Man for All Seasons," one of the best Broadway dramas of late, was staged on campus by the road company of that show. Would that the Honor Code for all seasons were: it wasn't and was loudly rejected by all but 10% of the classes voting.

Fall means football. The famed Iron

The Gaslight Singers appeared in Page.

The Student Union held a "Las Vegas Night."

Dukes of '38, untied and unscored on during regular-season play, only to lose the all-time heartbreaker in the Rose Bowl (to Southern Cal on a last-ditch TD pass with 40 seconds to go), were reunited. The stars of yesteryear looked on approvingly, as the '63 Blues took Clemson in a fierce Homecoming aerial battle. It may not have been football, but the Booze Bowl participants went at it tooth and nail, with Pro "smearing" the Chronicle. The paper came back with a "smear" review of Pro. There may not have been a connection, but the Chronicle received an All-American rating shortly thereafter.

For the intellectually-inclined, there was the Symposium. The topic was "Contemporary Literature: A Post-Human Age?", and the participants included Dr. Tom Driver, Ralph Ellison, W. D. Snodgrass, and Jules Feiffer. For the less serious, there were visits to the "new" Mayola's, the Carolina game, and the UMOC Contest.

administration were made official. Wright Tisdale became Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees, and Dr. Douglas M. Knight was formally installed as Duke's fifth and youngest president.

The change of seasons was heralded by the Chapel Choir, now in rehearsal for its annual presentation of Handel's "The Messiah" and by the seniors starting to sweat. Job interviews could be a mite discouraging. Die-hard liberal arts people wondered if it was too late to switch to engineering; scientists were ready to turn in their labcoats for a banker's gray suit. All the doors that a Duke education would magically open seemed, somehow, to have rusted hinges.

Christmas is a very merry and very personal time of year. "There's no place like home for the holidays." Just to make sure you realized the meaning of this, pre- and post-holiday doings removed any doubts you might have had. There was, for example, the first and last annual Animal Quad Ball, with a glass flying through the air one minute, a body being propelled after it the next. There were the forty days and forty nights shortened into one down in Wannamaker; some bright pledges were testing the wetness of water.

As holiday smiles turned into scowls with the thought of approaching exams, as news of a blessed event traveled over the grapevine, as Cassius Clay, alias Cassius X., alias, Muhammed Ali said "I'm the greatest" and proceeded to convince Mr. Liston, the normality of second semester imposed itself. The Robot Room was an accepted institution, Rush went smoothly and successfully, as 234 pledged. The Angus Barn burned, and Davidson College felt the heat generated by the "flaming live" in the Indoor Stadium.

A chain letter, unrivaled means for making money, made the rounds, until it was rudely intercepted by the U. S. Post Office and the Dean of Men, who announced that it was "illegal." The engineers made ready for their annual Show, and the basketball team made ready for Michigan. A giant pep rally sent the boys off to Kansas City, where they did us proud and came so painfully close to bringing home the grand prize.

Politics, in and out of the limelight throughout the year, was back in. There was a bitter fight for the right to live in the Governor's Mansion, but that seemed once removed. Five members of the faculty were hauled into court in connection with the uprising in Chapel Hill. They threatened to make federal cases out of the whole thing. There was, too, the annual horse race for the MSGA presidency, this time a three-way affair, surprisingly close. The Regional Model United Nations Assembly made some noise; the resignation of a senator made even more. Woodrow Wilson fellowships were announced, twice the number of Angier B. Duke Scholarships were awarded, and, suddenly, it was spring.

The slow trickle of announcements began: acceptances from graduate school, prayed-for draft deferments, wedding invitations, and the fact that the long-awaited new men's dormitory would be ready by 1965. Greek Weekend came and went, Joe College did the same, and the mass exodus to the Beach began, as Sunworship proved the most popular religion.

In recapping what has been said and anticipating what will be said about our collective career in the University, it must be remembered that mere words are inadequate. In the final and lasting analysis, Duke is an experience, in the fullest sense of the word, with many levels of meaning. Departing graduates may look back on four years of experience; on growth, awakening, change, and unexpected, new-found maturity. The pattern, if it exists, that characterizes these years is like unto a surrealist work of art: eerie, mysterious, even nightmarish; but withal light, hope, and reason for optimism. Consider.

1900-1901: we were the last males to sport singular collegiate chapeaux "dinks"; the SPE's were banished from the campus: President Hart underwent his sternest trial in dealing with the rioters who demonstrated for an extra day of vacation to root for our Cotton Bowl team: the demonstrators failed; but the team won over Arkansas, 7-6. The long chain of changes in the University administration began—new ideas and new faces to guide Duke through an era of transition; a favorite watering place, the "Null and Void" was also subjected to a face-lifting, ultimately to emerge as something called the "Triangle Coffee House," with the accent falling not on food and drink but on something called culture; we lived another chapter in the book of changing race relations, and the University announced the desegregation of the graduate and professional schools; new buildings to house the above-mentioned new ideas were laid out on the drawing boards and slowly took shape in brick and mortar; a long line of personalities, with their various talents and skills, passed by and challenged us to take notice, to look, listen, enjoy, and perhaps think: Ray McKinley, Les Brown, Will Herberg, Walter Kaufmann, Adlai Stevenson, E. Power Biggs, Marcel Marceau, the Brothers Four, and six different kinds of a nut, the self-styled "King of the World."

1961-1962: the year, like all years, was a time of coming and going. A new singing group, the HARLEQUINS, made its debut; the Campus Security Force withstood internal changes and acquired a new arsenal of equipment in its never-ending struggle to maintain peace and order in the midst of anarchy; the University adopted a new official seal; fraternities approved "open" relations; two dedicated educators announced their retirement, Dr. Davison, who led the Medical School from infancy to maturity as a leading research and treatment center, and Dean Brinkley, who graciously and skillfully presided over the Woman's College; tragedy struck, when five seniors in the School of Nursing were killed in an automobile wreck returning from a spring recess in Florida; the discordant shouts of the chowmen, provisioners to West Campus, were stilled, and a coat and tie was a ticket to the Oak Room for Sunday brunch; "outside" contributors to Duke life included John Ciardi, Henry Kissinger, Lionel Hampton (not again!), the Weavers, the Robert Shaw Chorale, Dave Brubeck, Duke Ellington, Bo Diddley, and a host of others.

1962-1963: a year of pause and a time to quickly regroup forces in preparing for our grand finale: another Duke institution, Ralph, the only boothlark who could polish suede or shine tennis shoes, passed from the scene; the long lines in the heretofore nameless main dining hall gave way to equally long lines in the free-flow Blue and White Room, student governments took a close, hard look at themselves and began debate on the putative merits of an honor system; the faculty, top-salaried body, was still caught up in the "publish or perish" dilemma, while, at the same time, more properly concerned with the dissemination and fruitful discussion of ideas; the experimental dorms were no longer an experiment, but a you-better-learn-to-live-with-us reality; the campus was heartened by the incredible success of the basketball team, by the long-awaited concession to voluntary class attendance, and by the announcement that a new President, youthful and vigorous Douglas M. Knight, had been chosen. In the midst of this gaiety came the sad news of the death of a popular and promising historian, Dr. Alfred Tischendorf. The parade of individuals who visited the campus continued: Allen Dulles, Ray Charles, Gerry Mulligan, Earl Warren, Mary Bunting, Edward Teller, Germaine Brée, Margaret Mead, the Chad Mitchell Trio, the Four Preps, Joan Baez, and such.

Deadline !!!

The 1964 CHANTICLEER wishes to thank the following persons for their assistance in the production of this year's annual:

Dr. Douglas M. Knight, President of the University, for his cordial warmth and advice.

Chairman Roger Marshall and the Publications Board for their counsel.

Mr. William J. Griffith, Mrs. Margaret Wilkins, and the Office of Student Activities for invaluable assistance.

Mr. Stephen C. Harward, Comptroller and Internal Auditor, for his interest and concern; Mr. Floyd D. Sawyer for assistance on financial matters.

Dr. Richard L. Tutthill, University Registrar, for his advice concerning the coverage of the administration and faculty.

Dr. Clarence E. Whitefield, Director, and Mr. William B. Strawn of the Bureau of Public Information, and Mr. Glenn E.

Mann, Director of the Office of Athletic Information, who contributed professional knowledge and skill and allowed us to make use of their materials and resources.

Mr. Thad W. Sparks, University Photographer, and Mr. Jim Wallace, who took many of the excellent photographs in the book.

Mr. W. F. Strayhorn and the Staff of the Information Desk, who assisted us and answered many questions.

Mr. Joseph F. Phelps, Edwards & Broughton Company, friend and mentor.

Mr. Price Coursey, Charlotte Engraving Company, for his patience, skill, and buoyant spirit which made our job so much easier and more enjoyable.

Mr. Fay Smith, Mr. James Churchill, and Mr. William Judd, all of Smith Studio, for excellent work in portrait photography.

Mr. Gene Burton and Vantone Studios, for superior fraternity and sorority composites.

Mr. Ed Roseberry, Corks and Curls, University of Virginia.

ASUC Photography, University of California at Berkeley.

Mr. Bill Sumits, Georgia Institute of Technology.

Mr. Charles Cooper, Herald-Sun Papers.

Most of all, to the CHANTICLEER staff, whose enthusiasm carried from September to the end. Their loyalty, cooperation, and superhuman efforts were more than we deserved.

(An aside to our fellow-travelers on Pub Row: thanks for the free coffee, the free cigarettes, the borrowed bent paper clips, staplers, dictionaries, the stale jokes, countless games of hall ball, memorable hours of small talk, and good fun.)
